GERMAN SUCCESS ALARMS FRANCE

PARLEY IN LONDON MAY BE DELAYED

TREATY OF VERSAILLES REVISION IMPOSSIBLE?

(By Telegraph. Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1904. Received Jan. 16, 7.30 a.m.)

London, Jan. 15. While the Saar plebiscite was expected to clear the political horizon in Europe to some extent, another cloud has unexpectedly appeared in the form of the postponement of the visit of the French statesmen, M. Flandin and M. Laval, to London.

News of the delay reached diplomatic circles after Monday's Cabinet conference, and is regarded as confirmation of reports that a hitch has occurred in Franco-British conversations.

It is understood that when Sir John Simon informed the Cabinet of the tenor of his talk with M. Laval, the French Foreign Minister, at Geneva on Saturday, the ministers felt that a delay in the visit of the French statesmen was desirable.

It is reported that M. Laval is not prepared to consent to abrogation of the military clauses of the Versailles Treaty without assurance from Great Britain that France's security will be protected. Britain is not ready to grant these guarantees.

France is more than ever apprehensive of a stiffening of German foreign policy following the announcement of the Saar plebiscite verdict.

However, Paris announces officially that M. Flandin will leave for London on January 31. —United Press.

COUNCIL MEETING

London, Jan. 15. Sir John Simon, British Foreign Minister, is probably going to Geneva on Thursday or Friday to attend the meetings of the League Council which will decide the length of period necessary for the transference of the administration of the Saar, and the date for the withdrawal of the International Force.

The British Government is in favour of a speedy decision as to the length of the transitional period, which, it is felt, should be as short as possible.

The customs barrier between the Saar and the rest of Germany will be taken down, and presumably the customs bar between the Saar and France will also be removed.

It is presumed that arrangements will have to be made whereby the Saarlanders will be able to exchange francs for Germany currency.

Well informed circles are of the opinion that the demilitarisation provisions of the Versailles Treaty will automatically apply to the Saar as being part of Germany. —Reuter.

GOEBBELS' ATTACK

Berlin, Jan. 15. A bitter attack has been made on Mr. Geoffrey Knox, Chairman of the Saar Governing Commission, by General Goebbels, in a "Mafeking Night" speech delivered outside the Ministry of Propaganda offices.

The German Minister said that Mr. Knox's emigrants had made him look ridiculous. He had only one task left, and that is, if ridicule can kill, to dig a mass grave for Saar emigrants.

Dr. Goebbels concluded with a lyrical appeal for peace.

PARIS UNEASY

There is a certain amount of apprehension in Paris. Relief at the result of the Saar voting is qualified in the French capital by the reflection that it will strengthen Herr Hitler's position at home, and probably stimulate a dynamic energy in foreign affairs, which may lead to Nazi ferment in Austria.

Le Temps, the prominent Paris newspaper, says the situation demands great prudence, and France, Great Britain and Italy should

RUSSIAN PLOTTERS CHARGED

ZINOVIEFF MAY FACE DEATH

TAKEN TO HIGH COURT

(Special to "Telegraph")

(By Telegraph. Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1904. Received Jan. 16, 7.30 a.m.)

Moscow, Jan. 15.

It is officially announced that the famous Russian politician Zinovieff, and his political allies in Opposition, Kamenev, Fedorov, Evdokimov and fifteen others, have been turned over to the Military Collegium of the Supreme Court.

They are charged with participating in a terrorist plot formulated by the "Moscow Centre", an organisation similar to the "Leningrad Centre," and dangerously antagonistic to the Administration.

Zinovieff, Kamenev and their friends were remanded in a lower court when charged with complicity in the murder of an official at Leningrad, Kirov. At this court the maximum sentence would have been five years in exile.

In the court in which they are at present any penalty may be imposed, including death. —United Press.

Zinovieff was the alleged author of a letter to the British Labour Government in which a plan was explained for the "commanding" of His Majesty's forces. The letter was largely responsible for the defeat of the government.

Anglo-Japan Contacts

SPECIAL COMMITTEE APPOINTED

(London, Jan. 15.)

As an outcome of its recent mission to the Far East, the Federation of British Industries has appointed a committee to maintain contact with the committee appointed by the Japan Economic Federation in Tokyo.

Lord Barnby is the Chairman of the Committee, and other members are Sir Arthur Balfour, Sir George Bishnell, Sir Harry McGowan, Sir Charles Seligman, Lord Cozey, Hardy, Mr. R. W. Allen, Mr. D. Boyle, Mr. Frank Fairall, Mr. Guy Lovcock, Mr. Julian Piggott, Mr. W. J. Wardcock, Colonel Morcom, and Mr. J. E. Mondson. —Reuter.

Rumours regarding the amount of the initial shipment, circulating here and in Shanghai yesterday, placed the value considerably lower than the accurate figure, due possibly to the fact that each of the cases used by the Bank of China in the present shipment contained $6,000 instead of $5,000, which is the contents of the ordinary Shanghai shipping case.

In circles usually well informed, it is learned that before the close of business yesterday the Bank of China in Hongkong had accumulated more than $1,000,000. In addition to the amounts already shipped, but that lack of time prevented this from being sent by either of the steamers leaving today. This amount is almost certain to be shipped by the steamer President McKinley of the Dollar Line, sailing from Hongkong for Shanghai January 18.

Indications in financial circles here to-day are that each fast steamer sailing from Hongkong for some time to come will carry approximately $500,000 consigned to Shanghai.

Mr. S. J. Chen, Manager of the Bank of China in Hongkong who is handling the purchase of some $20,000,000 for shipment to Shanghai, declined to make any statement on the subject.

Conspiracies Suspected

SEQUEL TO HARRIS CASE HEARD

(London, Jan. 15.)

After sixteen days' hearing, the Bow Street Magistrate has remanded the case against Frederick Edgar Rickards and Henry Joseph, charged in connection with developments arising from the fire conspiracy trial of Leopold Harris and others in 1933, until January 18, for committal to the Old Bailey.

Both the accused pleaded not guilty.

Rickards and Joseph were charged with unlawfully conspiring with Harris and others to defraud insurance companies by making fraudulent claims. —Reuter.

RELIEF FOR FAMINE AREAS

LARGE SUM SET ASIDE

(Shanghai, Jan. 16.)

According to Mr. Hau Shih-yung, Chairman of the China Famine Relief Commission, who recently visited Nanking in connection with the problem of relieving the famine-stricken districts throughout the country during the winter season, the Central Government has remitted to the Commission a first instalment of $300,000 and has promised to remit the next instalment of $250,000 within ten days.

As a result of his discussion with the Nanking authorities, he said, a preliminary plan has been drawn up for the establishment of a Rural District Credit Corporation, which would be financed by capital fixed at $10,000,000. Thirty per cent. of the capital would be subscribed by the Central Bank of China and the rest would be subscribed by a number of leading Chinese banks. —Central News.

In the meantime, the men who had railed the junk had made off with the craft, taking with them the three women and two children.

Expenditure for the same period, exclusive of self-balancing items, was $553,158,191, which exceeds the amount expended at the corresponding date last year by $7,129,266. —British Wireless.

DOLLARS FLOWING NORTH

CHINA BANKS BUYING

The steamers Empress of Russia of the Canadian Pacific Line and the President Taft of the Dollar Line, which sailed for Shanghai this morning, carried slightly in excess of $800,000 (Chinese standard dollars) shipped by the Bank of China and the Bank of Communications who are buying in Hongkong approximately $20,000,000, with a view to relieving the tight money situation which has prevailed recently in Shanghai, a United Press correspondent here says.

The P. and O. steamer Rawalpindi, which arrived at Shanghai Sunday last, carried slightly more than $500,000 comprising the first shipment made by the Bank of China since inaugurating its present buying programme.

Rumours regarding the amount of the initial shipment, circulating here and in Shanghai yesterday, placed the value considerably lower than the accurate figure, due possibly to the fact that each of the cases used by the Bank of China in the present shipment contained $6,000 instead of $5,000, which is the contents of the ordinary Shanghai shipping case.

FILMLAND NEWS

Actual War Scenes in
"Forgotten Men"

TAKEN AT THE FRONT

"Forgotten Men," a film of the war, all the scenes of which are authentic, and, with a few exceptions, have never before been seen by the public, was privately shown in London recently.

The film depicts the fighting on land, sea, and in the air, and the audience is spared nothing of its horrors. Soldiers are seen in the act of bayoneting others, or pitching forward on their faces as the shells burst or the machine-gun bullets go home. Aeroplanes are filmed as they dive to their destruction, and ships torpedoed by the Germans rear up as if in agony as they sink.

The mud of Passchendaele, the tortured trees of the Somme, the blasted sides of the wall of rock which was the scene of the Italian campaign, and the flat wastes of the Russian front are all depicted with soldiers in the act of killing or being killed.

If the censor passes it, the film will be shown publicly in London soon.

The material has been assembled by British International Pictures from films actually taken at the front by British, French, German, Russian, and Italian cameramen between 1914 and 1918. General Sir Ian Hamilton speaks a short prologue, and Sir John Hammerton provides a running commentary, with occasional help from several V.C.s and other war veterans. They are shown grouped in a room, listening to Sir John's remarks, and every now and then one of them is asked to describe a personal experience.

Two German ex-soldiers contribute to the commentary, and there is a suggestion throughout that war hatreds should now be forgotten.

Whether or not the film will altogether fulfil its intended purpose as a powerful argument for pacifism, a generation too young to remember the War will, at least, be able to see a good many grisly scenes that actually happened, and to gain some idea of what fighting was like on the various fronts. The producers, however, rightly recognise that the film is not suitable for children, and it will be shown with an accompanying war warning to this effect.

THE COMING OF COLOUR

Colour has arrived in films, both in London and in Hollywood.

A new film, "Radio Parade of 1935," produced by British International Pictures at Elstree, has introduced 1,500 feet of Dufay-colour.

Colour pictures in Hollywood are now making "Becky Sharp," with Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Miriam Hopkins, and Nigel Bruce, entirely in colour.

Mirian C. Cooper is preparing an all-colour version of "The Last Days of Pompeii," to be followed by "The Three Musketeers," starring Francis Lederer.

Technicolor is also to be used in the filming of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," which Max Reinhardt is producing for Warner; while the American millionaire, John Hay Whitney, has announced that he will invest £1,400,000 in making nine films in Technicolor in the next two years.

In London the owners of Dufay-colour are already making preparations for the production of a full-length film of the Royal Silver Jubilee celebrations next May.

London Film Production have laid plans for the making of "Lawrence of Arabia" in Colour-gravure, which it is hoped will be

BATTER ROLL

Make a quarter of a pint of ordinary Yorkshire pudding batter for about five or six ounces of cold meat. Mince the meat finely, and add an ounce of bread-crumb and a skinned and sliced tomato. Melt a quarter of a pint of stock or gravy, and season thoroughly. Heat everything in a pan. Melt a small piece of lard in a frying-pan. Pour in the batter and fry on either side. Turn on to a large sheet of paper. Spread it with the hot mince. Roll up and serve immediately.

MINCED VEAL PIE

Mince some cold veal and add to it any scraps of ham or tongue you have by you. Mix the meat with a little thickened white sauce, flavour with chopped lemon peel, cayenne pepper, and a little salt. Arrange the mixture in a pie-dish and, if you wish to improve it, add a beaten egg. Cover with bread-crumb, scatter a little grated cheese over, with a few bits of butter on the top. Bake until the top is browned.

available to all producers by next autumn.

Alexander Korda, who is to produce "Lawrence of Arabia," said in an interview with the Daily Mail:

"The coming of colour is an inevitable as the coming of electricity, but two things are essential to its success. In the first place we must not add materially to film production costs.

"In the second place colour must be used artistically. Art is a process of elimination, so that the problem of colour is not the perfection of so-called natural colour, but the perfection of a process which will be as flexible in the hands of a producer as colours on the palette of a painter."

"By the control of colour tones we must be able to photograph moods of exteriors and interiors. We must have the works of great artists as our ideal."

Considerate Japan
MUST NOT OFFEND TOURISTS

Toyko, Jan. 9. The Investigation Council, designed to improve general treatment of foreign tourists in Japan, has been established under auspices of the Board of International Tourist Industry of the Railway Ministry.

The establishment of the new Council followed a series of complaints on the treatment of foreign tourists, which had been received by the Tourist Bureau.

At the first meeting of the Council the following proposals were considered:

1. On all Japanese ships maps clearly indicating the positions of Japan's fortified zones together with pamphlets explaining them in English, shall be provided for free distribution to incoming foreign tourists.

2. Old signs marking fortified zones shall be replaced by new ones.

3. Customs examination for tourists, if done at first arriving port, shall not be repeated at next port.

4. Scholars, school teachers, students and other prominent tourists with introductions from a Japanese embassy or legation shall be given generous treatment upon their arrival in Japan.

5. Foreign tourists travelling in Japan with certificates, issued by leading tourist organisations, in Japan, shall not be investigated by government officials.

6. Where indications are that the foreigners staying in Japan for long periods will travel in distant parts of the country the relations between the central and local governments shall be maintained as previously.—United Press.

SURE EASE FOR LADY'S MAID

London. A lady's maid, Kate Collins, received £150, a sable coat, a large collection of clothing, and a life annuity of £300, under the will of her former mistress. The Right Hon. Alexandra Baroness Wendarle, in making this bequest in her will, wrote: "Nothing I have done for her can equal what she has done for me, and it is only my duty to ensure her a comfortable old age." Baroness Wendarle, who died on October 14, left £11,000.

that some trifles like a green tie, the greenness of which has no value, may destroy the emotion of a scene or a character. These are our problems, but they must be solved, since the coming of colour cannot longer be delayed."

THE MIGHTY BARNUM

Darryl Zanuck has just completed the production of "The Mighty Barnum." To Wallace Beery has fallen the honour of impersonating the great P. T. Barnum, and as Beery started in the show business himself as an elephant trainer, he may be expected to infuse the typical circus colour into the character of the man who invented the phrase, "There's one born every minute."

The other principal members of the cast include Adolphe Menjou, Virginia Bruce, and Rochelle Hudson, to say nothing of General Tom Thumb, the "Cardiff Giant," the Bearded Lady, the Wild Man of Borneo, the Fiji Mermaid, Jumbo, the World's Largest Elephant, and Barnum's 1,000 Wonders.

CARY GRANT'S NEXT

Cary Grant, who has just signed a further long term contract with Paramount, is to play opposite Claudette Colbert in "One Woman."

BRIBERY LUNCHES IN BUSINESS

BAD EXAMPLE SET BY SOCIAL CLIMBERS

“FEEDING THE LIONS”

BY OSCAR MILLARD

FEEDING the “lions” has long been a recognised means for the social climber to achieve recognition. It would seem, however, that this abusive use of the invitation to luncheon or dinner is becoming widespread in business life, and has come to be considered by many firms as legitimate and effective bait for business men.

Numerous firms which depend largely on personal contact between their outside staff and the executives of business houses encourage their representatives to invite potential clients to lunch, for the purpose of serving up selling talk with the biscuits and cheese. To this end, the firms allocate comparatively large sums to “entertainment expenses” in their advertising appropriations. And their representatives make a living by lunching instead of by straightforward salesmanship.

This gastronomical gullo is known as psychological salesmanship, and is based on the belief that a man always feels more kindly disposed towards his fellows, and is therefore, more amenable to persuasion, after a good meal than on an empty stomach.

MEN WHO REFUSE

Save in the case of dyspeptics with whom such methods might well be disastrous—there is, no doubt, much truth in this age-old axiom. But is the corollary deduced from it really sound bala-

THEY CELEBRATE LATER

Abrupt, where palm-oil in some form or other plays a preponderant part in salesmanship, the invitation to lunch is not effective and is seldom received. Very wisely the foreigner considers that eating is a full-time job, and the surest way of offending him is to talk too much during a meal.

It may be noticed that most men lunch alone in Paris, even though on leaving the office they may have had the “aperitif” together. And when it comes to business the usual thing is to do the talking over the “aperitif” and, if the deal is a big one, celebrate it over a bottle of champagne later in the day. But of recent years they have adopted the phrase “Business is business,” and as a general rule the ordinary run of business is done in the office.

It might perhaps be well if salesmen remembered that Britain originated that phrase, and that the great majority of British business men prefer to act upon it.

LUXURY SPENDING

SURE SIGN OF BETTER TIMES

New York, Jan. 9.

“Luxury spending” is becoming more noticeable in the United States and is aiding industry, reports of various business groups indicate.

This grouping includes everything from the baby’s doll to the palatial yacht and some place in between is fine furs—and all trade organisations report an increase.

Many men have made it a rule always to refuse lunch invitations from strangers. Apart from the fact that they look to the lunch hour for relaxation and therefore do not want to take their business to the table, they resent the implied suggestion concealed in the casual phrase “Let’s talk it over at lunch.” And even when this invitation is accepted, the recipients are never blind to the selling hook lurking in their lunch.

Stricken with a heart attack, Mr. George Bernard Shaw, world-famous playwright, has been confined to his bed at his home in London, and is receiving medical attention. His attending physician, who described the attack as “not serious,” said the 78-year-old author had been overworking.

ness? Do business men prefer discussing their work over a table in a restaurant rather than at the desk in their own office?

I have put the question to several executives in different classes of business. And from their replies it would seem clear that they heartily dislike the practice.

Apart from the fact that they look to the lunch hour for relaxation and therefore do not want to take their business to the table, they resent the implied suggestion concealed in the casual phrase “Let’s talk it over at lunch.” And even when this invitation is accepted, the recipients are never blind to the selling hook lurking in their lunch.

WOMEN SECRETARIES

This subtle form of corruption is employed widely with women secretaries known to have influence over the chief’s decisions. In their fatuity many men believe that a fancy lunch and a few boxes of chocolates will work wonders on a woman. They do not seem to realise that if a woman can hold down a job in which her judgment counts she is most probably smarter than a man would be at seeing a hook in the bait.

Indicative of American spending is the fact that amusement tax revenues are growing sharply, mainly from theatres.

One major company is sponsoring a revival of interest in billiards, by dint of scrapping out noted players, and expects to create 5,000,000 new players during the year 1935.—United Press.

Another actress from England has risen to stardom in foreign lands. Above is pictured Nova Pilbeam, 14-year-old actress, who was born in Nova Scotia, Canada, and named after the land of her birth. She is starring in major productions in both England and United States and is under contract with Gaumont-British.

PHOTOGRAPHING THOUGHT

ELECTRIC IMPULSE FROM THE BRAIN

Cambridge. Two men at Cambridge University have succeeded in photographing thought, by recording and amplifying the electric impulses sent out by the brain.

There was shown in the physiology laboratory recently a strip of celluloid on which were recorded the increase of the electrical waves caused by a man opening his eyes. These electrical impulses are capable of being transformed into sound waves and broadcast.

The man who is conducting these amazing experiments is Dr. E. D. Adrian, university lecturer in physiology here and Foulerton Professor of the Royal Society. He is working in association with Mr. Brian Matthews, of King’s College, who has elaborated the necessary apparatus.

“Dr. Adrian,” says Professor Joseph Barcroft, Professor of Physiology at Cambridge, “has been the mainspring for many years of the investigation of the mysteries of the nervous system.”

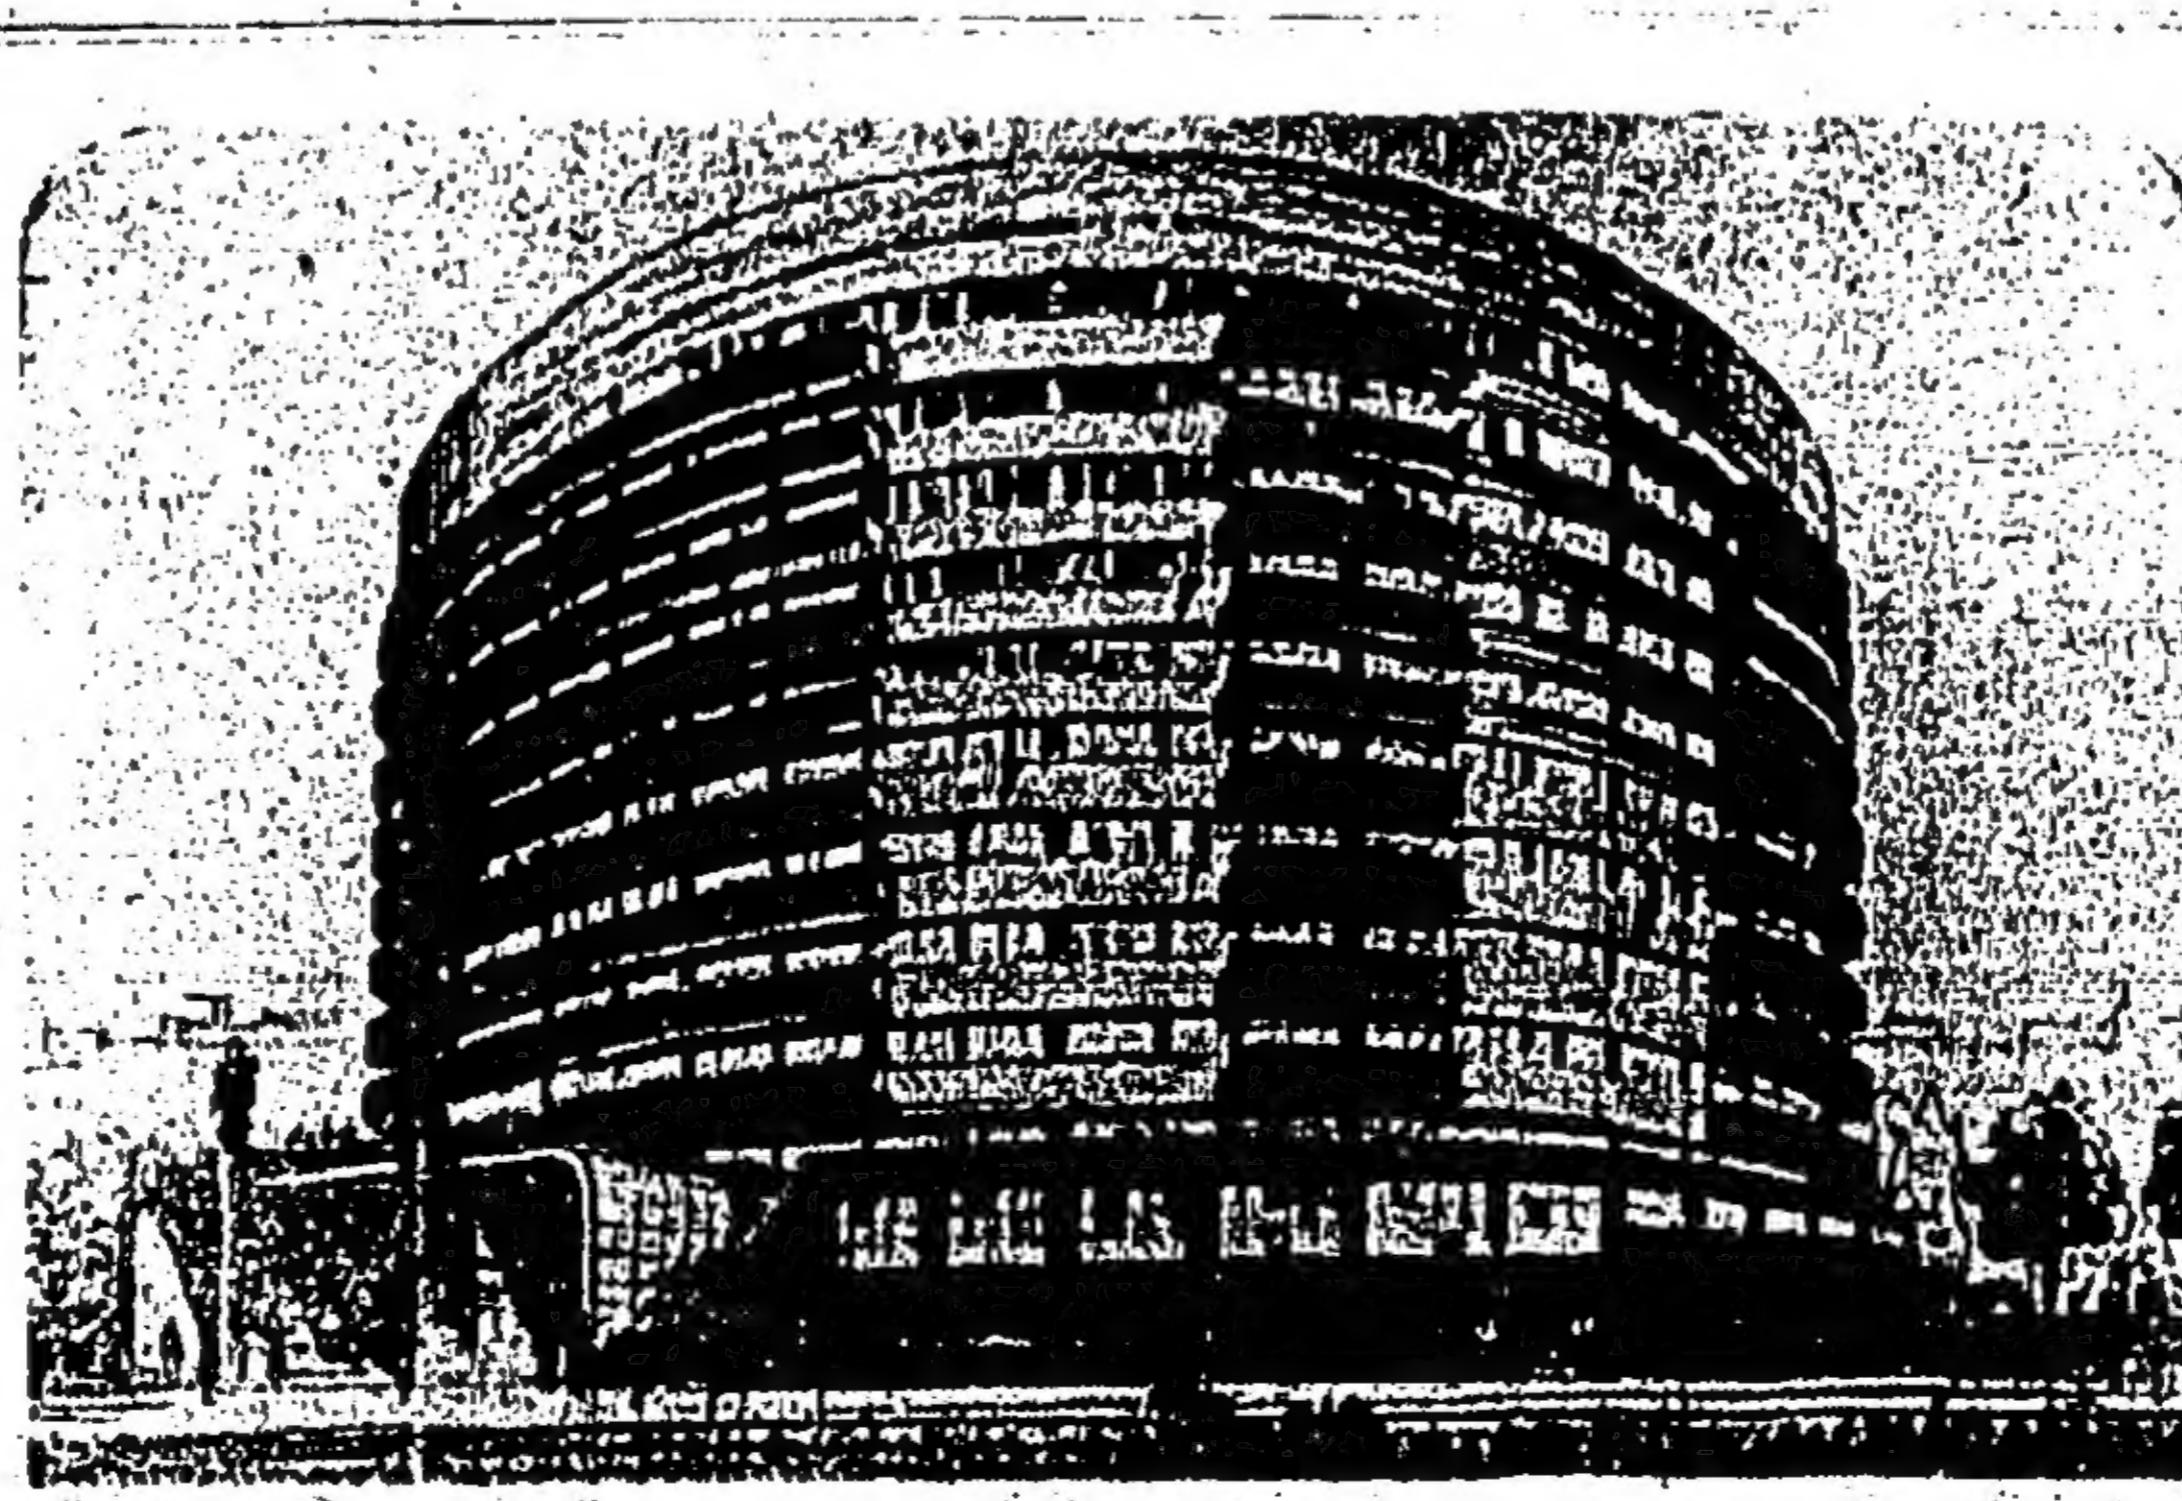

Dr. Adrian, the professor went on to explain, has demonstrated that when the mind was quiescent—as with a man seated in an armchair, with eyes closed, thinking of nothing in particular—there was a regular discharge of electrical impulses from the brain at the rate of about 10 a second.

If the subject opens his eyes and concentrates his attention the impulses jump to about 2,000 a second.

The greater part of the brain appears to be inactive in any mental process.”

Professor Barcroft added that Dr. Adrian has discovered the nature of the messages to the brain: On the long wave emanating from the brain in repose there was superimposed the thought wave due to physical sensation or mental concentration. These thought waves varied in intensity and frequency.

Like gigantic mushrooms, tremendous circular flats like these will be erected throughout England in a new era of housing projects. There will be a circular courtyard in the ten-storey cylinder and 150 families may be accommodated. A spendthrift window arrangement insures maximum of sunlight. The flats, which are built 20 per cent cheaper than those of ordinary type, are designed to furnish Britain’s solution of her slum clearance problem.

NORTHERN BANDITS

NORTHERN VILLAGERS LOOTED BY LARGE BAND

Shanghai, Jan. 15.

At least thirty villages in Fung and Taolouying Districts were thoroughly looted by a group of armed bandits, about 300 in number, who invaded the Luantung territory from outside the Great Wall last week-end. They are being engaged with the Chinese Public Safety Guards, who are forming a cordon around them.

VICK'S VA-TRO-NOL* is amazingly successful!

* NOTE... For Your Protection. The remarkable success of these Vick's drops—for nose and throat—has brought scores of imitations. Don't confuse this real medication with mere "oil drops." The trade-mark Va-tro-nol is your protection in getting this exclusive Vick's formula. Always ask for Vick's Va-tro-nol.

Already, millions of families have found the way to fewer colds with this remarkable aid in preventing colds—Vicks Va-tro-nol.

Va-tro-nol is especially designed for the nose and throat—where most colds start. It aids and stimulates the functions provided by Nature—in the nose—to prevent colds, and to throw off, colds in their early stages.

Where irritation has led to a clogged-up nose (a stuffy head cold or nasal catarrh) Va-tro-nol penetrates deep into the nasal passages—reduces swollen membranes—clears away clogging mucus—brings comforting relief.

NOTES OF THE DAY

EMPIRE MAILS

It cannot be too often or too strongly stressed that the success of an Imperial air mail service depends upon frequency of operations and cheapness of rates. It is necessary to have support for such services, and the surest way to obtain support is to offer the public a rate within reach of every purse. Once the facilities are there, and provided that the costs are not out of all proportion to those of the existing postal system over land and sea, the public will respond. But no government can be so optimistic as to expect that the bulk of the mails will be considered so important as to warrant the outlay of a shilling when one can get reasonably quick delivery for twopence. Sir Kingsley Wood is shrewd enough to realize that he must provide this frequent, fast air mail service, and at a minimum cost, in order to attract cash customers. He says he expects to provide an Empire service which will take a letter from England half-way around the globe at a cost of 1½d. by 1937. He adds that in order to accomplish this Britain must have the closest co-operation of the Dominions and Colonies. At 1½d. rates the Postmaster-General will get all the co-operation he requires, and if all that is lacking to success is a bulky mail freight, it will be provided by Africa, Australia, Canada and India, and every other corner of the Empire. Of that there is no doubt whatever.

In my own field one thing is certain. The circular gramophone disc will go. It will be replaced by some kind of sound-on-film system closely to the manuscript rolls we had in the early days of writing. Thus there will be no need to break up a symphony into twelve equal parts and jump up to turn the record at each part until the effect of the music is ruined twelve different times.

We shall just sit still and do nothing, as the fortunate possessors of gramophones which automatically change the records are able to do to-day.

Also, I see much in the portable set. In all probability the fundamental system underlying this idea will be expanded until every radio gramophone—there will be no more separate radio receivers or gramophones—will be all-electric, without aerial or earth, and equipped with television apparatus by which we shall see studio programmes, current events, or the latest films, according to the alternative programme we select—there will be dozens from which to choose. But we shall probably have these things within thirty years, and they may be antiquated before 2034.

Before care-free wireless sets can become universal, however, every country will have to be "electrified." Several European countries are still relying on gas for their main power, so there is still much to be done.

"We shall have real broadcasting," says Signor Arturo Toscanini. Broadcasting certainly has done a lot in its fourteen years of life, but I am not altogether sure that its work has been "to the good," he goes on.

In the world of music radio has done nothing but separate the heart of music from its body. At the moment you cannot hear an orchestra through a loud speaker. You merely hear a tune—a very, very different thing. The ordinary loud speaker of to-day has no more to do with true music than has a hurdy-gurdy.

It is hoped, however, that within a century much change will have been wrought. Broadcasting on the Continent and in America must be freed from the chains both of State and of advertising which encompass it. If I had my way, every broadcasting station should be ruled by a selected body of musicians, dramatists, and other satellites of the creative arts.

Eventually a perfect loud speaker will be invented, and then every sphere of human activity, the placing of each separate brick on the wall of civilization, will be broadcast from one station or another.

Not a public event but will be described to listeners, not a concert that will not be overheard by the microphone, not a single speech of note that will not be followed by millions.

There will be no studios as we know them. Every place will be

The Laval way seems to be to allay passions, to avoid extremes. In some quarters, his methods have come in for sharp criticism, but whilst it may still be doubted whether he will be able to put an end to the fears and suspicions of Germany which have influenced French policy for so long, he may none the less apply the brakes to a movement which was fast carrying France to a rupture with Germany. There are two courses open to French diplomacy. One assumes the implacability of German hostility, and, believing that no concessions, no proclamations of friendship will change things, would pursue the policy of alliances and armaments. The other assumes the possibility of improving Franco-German relations, and would therefore seek arrangements towards that end. The trouble hitherto has been that France has often appeared to waver between these two conceptions. With the major issue of the future status of the Saar out of the way, the prospect is opened up for a much-needed rapprochement. That accomplished, the future peace of Europe should be assured for many years to come.

BROADCASTING ONE CENTURY HENCE

WE shall be "all-electric," says Christopher Stone, one century from now. In a recent film it was indicated that in ten years we shall have combined wireless telephones and televisions in everyday use. If this is going to happen in ten years, and remembering what has happened in the past ten years, how shall I date what shall be a century hence? No, I can merely indicate the general trend of the way things will probably go, he adds.

In my own field one thing is certain. The circular gramophone disc will go. It will be replaced by some kind of sound-on-film system closely to the manuscript rolls we had in the early days of writing.

Thus there will be no need to break up a symphony into twelve equal parts and jump up to turn the record at each part until the effect of the music is ruined twelve different times.

We shall just sit still and do nothing, as the fortunate possessors of gramophones which automatically change the records are able to do to-day.

Propaganda will be useless as a method of working up the feelings of one nation against another. Indeed, I doubt if nations as we know them to-day will still exist, because we shall have rid ourselves of the barrier of languages.

Some international tongue will be universally spoken as Latin was spoken by the relatively few educated people in the Middle Ages, and we shall not think of a German or a Russian or a Siamese as being much more of a stranger than a man of to-day who comes from some other part of the British Isles and speaks a different dialect.

In all this the League of Nations (as the political organisation), aviation (as the quickest means of transport), and broadcasting in all its form (as the most effective method of exchanging ideas) will play a very important part. In fact, without broadcasting, I doubt if the ideal of close political co-operation between all nations could possibly be achieved.

Foreign languages will be unknown," says M. E. M. Stephan. I agree with Mr. Bartlett. Solely through the tremendous power of broadcasting, I believe that long before another century has passed, perhaps within fifty or sixty years, we shall see an "international language."

This will be based on a mixture of English and American, varied in different countries only according to the accent of the country concerned. Thus some of the outrageous slang terms of the present will be respectable words in the future, he states.

Wireless tends to standardise English. Even at the present time we have many Continental stations giving frequent announcements in your language, and more people are learning it every day. With the advent of broadcasting over three hundred million people have come within common touch.

This was inevitable. Certain languages must disappear and must give way to English in the same way as the language of Brittany once gave way to the language of the French and is now little heard.

French itself is losing the foothold it has long had as an international language, the language of diplomacy. English is replacing it. Similarly, the Bulgarian and Serbian languages are marked out for death. Radio is the murderer.

Yes, in a hundred years' time we shall all speak one language; the outlandish tongue of "the foreigner" will have disappeared.

From making a miss step we finally made a mis-step and suffered a fall from which we have never recovered.

We married Mrs. Bogg who at the former Miss Hogg, had gone to most of our dances.

You will here remark, what could have made a better partnership than the harmony-making union of a Hogg with a Bogg? But strange as it may seem, Fate here willed otherwise.

From that moment instead of "leading" in the partnership, we found we were being led. Miss Bogg has also been calling the tune and setting the step.

Two things were left to us to choose. Writing the Memories of Bogg the Incomparable Dancer or taking to drink.

We elected the latter course as being the safer with Mrs. Bogg still actively about. "Doddering old fool," we have heard her retort, tartly, when we broached our intended literary project to her.

And so it is, Girls, that you see what you now see, a wreck of our former terpsichorean self. We admit it seemed unbelievable that in it could have at one time dwelt the terpsichorean soul of a great Bogg.

We were, in short, the Beau of the Early Nineties.

Still, you can come up and see us sometime.

The Very Idea!

WE SHAKE A LEG

By Horatio ("Sneaky") Bogg

A sensation has been raised by us inadvertently appearing as a judge in the Dance Competitions. Some who still doubt our capability, have gone so far as to hint that as far as shaking a leg is concerned we cannot tell a quick-step from a mis-step, or a mis-step from a stumble.

This is a gratuitous opinion to be treated with the deep contempt it deserves, but since the point has been raised, we feel we must do something about it, if only to preserve our reputation as a man-about-town.

Certainly not of our own volition that the honour of being a judge came to us. In fact, it was thrust on us through a combination of circumstances. What those were, need not be gone into here, save that when we made a ceremonious, unexpected and dramatic entry into the Garden in the midst of the competitions, the effect was what might have been expected.

"Good old Bogg!" "Dear Mr. Bogg!" came a unanimous chorus of greeting.

A whisper went round that the great Mr. Bogg whose knowledge was incomparable on dancing matters, had condescended to grace the event with his presence, and furthermore, had consented, but only after much persuasion, to preside as a judge.

Our usual quick intelligence grasped the situation. It demanded the exercise we could see of three great qualities, to wit, a perfect composure, a judicial dignity with impartiality, and that indefinable something known as "it."

With these three qualities our great and admiring public have informed us we are richly endowed. On this special occasion we managed to combine them in a charming way.

Now can you say of us that we are not conversant with the essentials of that which we were supposed to judge.

You may not believe it, but the truth must be told: we were a champion prancer—we mean dancer—in our time. That was before good living and H.K. beer had begun to lay a heavy hand on us.

We had those broad shoulders, and until the hump on our chest shifted to a lower position the slender waist and swiftness and stream-line form indispensable to a champ.

We were the cynosure of all eyes the first time we appeared. The girls instantly fell in love with us, and we fell on the floor in our anxiety not to disappoint them.

It may be said that right away we got rhythm, and from that day our life was just one song and dance.

From making a miss step we finally made a mis-step and suffered a fall from which we have never recovered.

We married Mrs. Bogg who at the former Miss Hogg, had gone to most of our dances.

You will here remark, what could have made a better partnership than the harmony-making union of a Hogg with a Bogg? But strange as it may seem, Fate here willed otherwise.

From that moment instead of "leading" in the partnership, we found we were being led. Miss Bogg has also been calling the tune and setting the step.

We elected the latter course as being the safer with Mrs. Bogg still actively about. "Doddering old fool," we have heard her retort, tartly, when we broached our intended literary project to her.

And so it is, Girls, that you see what you now see, a wreck of our former terpsichorean self. We admit it seemed unbelievable that in it could have at one time dwelt the terpsichorean soul of a great Bogg.

We were, in short, the Beau of the Early Nineties.

Still, you can come up and see us sometime.

"Maybe you're just one of those people who never learned to relax."

BRITISH OPINION

London, Jan. 15. The general view taken in British circles with regard to the Saar Plebiscite result is that quite apart from every other consideration, the emphatic nature of the vote has definitely simplified the situation.

British interest in the Saar has naturally been considerably increased by the leading role which British troops have taken in the measures for ensuring the maintenance of order there, and it is with considerable gratification that British opinion notes the absence hitherto of any serious disorder.

Some anxious days still remain, but there is increasing confidence that these will pass in comparative peace.

There seems little doubt that the decision of the Council, by which the Saar territory will be reunited to Germany, will in fact now be little more than a formality. The main point that remains to be decided is the length of the interregnum required to enable the transfer to take place.

SOME OF THE PROBLEMS

Certain matters which have to be done will require time. For example, the Customs offices on the west of the territory will be removed and others substituted on the east, while local administration will also have to be transferred. The currency problem has been dealt with in part by the Alois Committee appointed by the League Council and in part by the Bank of International Settlements.

The geographical position of the Saar assures that it will become part of a demilitarised zone. One of the last things likely to happen before the transfer of the territory will be the withdrawal of the international force.

It remains for the League Council to fix dates on these matters on recommendations made to it by Baron Alois's Saar Committee. In an earlier report of that Committee it was suggested that a minimum time limit should be fixed to allow for the administration transfers, and the period they suggested was one month.

Some time ago, both the German and French Governments gave an assurance that, whatever the result of the vote might be, minorities should not be subjected to reprisals or discrimination.

It is anticipated that Sir John Simon will return to Geneva towards the end of the week to participate in the Council's decisions. He has already made known his desire that the necessary arrangements shall be completed within the shortest possible time.—British Wireless.

FRENCH VISIT

London, Jan. 15. It was to-day arranged that the visit to London of the French Premier and Foreign Secretary, MM. Flandin and Laval, should take place on Thursday, January 31, and conversations will be held on the Friday and Saturday.

The invitation was originally extended to them by Sir Simon when he passed through Paris shortly before Christmas.

It is the desire of the British Government, shared also by French Ministers, that the European situation should not be allowed to drift, and, in consequence, the opportunity was welcomed for discussing the broad basis upon which major European problems can be approached.

It is with this idea, rather than with the idea of taking definite decisions on any particular points, that the conversations will take place, and there would seem some possibility that the meeting may prove to be only the first of others in which European statesmen will attempt to reach a solution of large issues still outstanding.—British Wireless.

IN WIRELESS TOUCH

The following ships are expected to be in wireless communication with Hongkong to-day:—Haldis, Ryufuku Maru, Atta, Lushan Maru, Hadotsu, Tjembang, Unyo, Maru, Tynebank, Glenamoy, Bengal Maru, Jean Labord, Golden Dragon, Michigan, Nalden, Suyu Maru, General Le, President Harrison.

MISSIONARIES OFFEND

Changchun, Jan. 16. Indicating their indignation over the alleged misbehaviour of foreign missionaries in Manchuria in supplying information to the press abroad as to conditions in Manchuria, under the Manchukuo regime, the Manchukuo authorities have ordered the restriction of the activities and movements of foreign missionaries.—Central News.

NAVAL FUNERAL

FULL HONOURS FOR VICTIM OF ACCIDENT

Full naval honours attended the funeral at the Colonial Cemetery yesterday of William John Willgoss, aged 25, a Leading Stoker of H.M.S. Adventure. Willgoss was killed through a fall early on Monday morning from a balcony of the China Fleet Club.

A firing party from Willgoss's ship and a Marine Band from H.M.S. Berwick preceded the coffin, which was draped with a Union Jack and drawn along by shipmates on a gun-carriage. On the carriage were also his sea-chest.

Arriving at the gate of the Cemetery, the coffin was borne by shipmates to the Chapel where a short service was held before interment. The Rev. C. S. F. O'Rourke O'Dwyer, of H.M.S. Hormus, officiated.

Three volleys were fired over the grave, and a bugler sounded "The Last Post."

Capt. W. H. Gell, D.S.O., R.N. Commander of H.M.S. Adventure, was chief mourner, with Commander E. A. D. Bonny and other officers of the Adventure. The Royal Marines were represented by a party from the same ship. Units from all naval men-of-war in harbour were present. Altogether, over 170 men were in the cortège.

Wreaths were laid on the grave from the following: Ship's Company, H.M.S. Adventure; Chief Petty Officers, Stoker Petty Officers, Chief Stokers and Mechanics, Chief and Engine Room Artificers, Royal Marines, and a number of Messes on the ship.

Funeral of the Mother Of Dr. Arthur Fung

Mrs. Fung, the aged mother of Dr. Arthur Fung, a well-known local practitioner, died at her residence at 761 Nathan Road, Kowloon, on Monday night after a short illness.

She was the wife of Mr. L. Fung, and is survived by him and their only son, Dr. Fung, and two grandchildren.

The funeral was held at the Chinese Christian Cemetery, Kowloon City, yesterday afternoon, the chief mourners present being the widower and the two grandchildren. Rev. Mr. K. N. Tsang officiated.

Dr. Fung is absent from the Colony on visit to Indo-China. Wreaths were sent by the family and friends.

DOLLAR'S SHARP RISE

1s. 9d. MARK NOW REACHED

The Hongkong dollar rose a farthing this morning to 1s. 9d., following a slight rise in silver prices in London, due partly to the big drop in the cross-rate.

The market locally this morning was firm, inter-bank business being done at 1s. 9d., and 1s. 9.5/16.

Silver rose 1/16th in London, India, and China bought, whilst speculators sold, business being small.

In New York silver was unchanged at 54 1/4.

SHANGHAI CONFERENCE

CINEMA NEWS

NOTES FROM THE THEATRES

A love story, replete with drama, action and passion, yet entirely free from the morosity of the usual hospital picture, a rapidly moving, superably acted silver screen romance, "Registered Nurse," featuring beautiful Bobe Daniels, which comes to the Alhambra Theatre to-morrow.

First National shows which include the depressing somniums of the institutions life, as well as in casting the production, Bobe Daniels, still youthful despite her long career in the movies, which incidentally she entered at the age of twelve, and more beautiful than ever in a nurse's costume, again shows the talent that made her the first outstanding star of the silent films to secure a personal hit in talking pictures. Miss Daniels is ably supported by two leading men, Kyle Talbot in the role of the villain, and John Halliday, as the hero. Irene Franklin, the famous musical star, lends a bit of refreshment to the production as a lady of easy morals. Other members of the cast are uniformly excellent and include such well-known players as Gordon Weston, Minna Gombell, Beulah Bondi, Vince Barnett, Phillip Reed, Mayo Methot, Virginia Dale and Renee Whitney.

"That's A Good Girl" is the big attraction at the King's Theatre on Thursday, "That's A Good Girl," is based upon the famous stage success which Jack Buchanan produced and starred in at the London Hippodrome. The film is musical, as was the original, but with the exception of "Fancy Our Meeting" retained from the stage show, all the music in the picture is specially written. Musical director of the film, and composer of the new music, is Phillip Graham, author of "Limelight Blues" and other famous popular numbers a musician who can copy, compose, conduct and orchestrate—a most rare combination of accomplishments. Jack Buchanan is supported by a first-class cast, including Elsie Randolph, who recreates the role she played in the stage version. Vera Pearce plays Beata; Garry Marshall is French; Moray; William Kendall is blithely vacuous as Timothy; Dorothy Hyson makes an attractive Moya; Kate Cutler is the aunt whose word is law; Anthony Hall and Frank Stanmore play other significant parts.

"The Fighting Marshall"

An escaped convict acting as sheriff. That is the paradoxical characterisation that Tim McCoy interprets in his latest Columbia western, "The Fighting Marshall," showing at the Astor Picture House. And it is all done for purpose and in a manner the sounds just as paradoxical. This misrepresentation is assumed so that it will be easier for the public to identify the sheriff or ex-convict to rob a payroll that rightfully belongs to him, so that he will be able to prove his innocence of the crime for which he was convicted to life imprisonment. An illegal route to justice! But when he falls in love, he abandons this method and confesses all. Does Justice triumph in spite of all, or are the Fates against this ethically unlawful masquerader? Tim McCoy is supported by a notable cast, which includes Dorothy Gulliver, Mary Carr, Matthew Betz, Pat O'Malley, Edward Le Saint and Harry Todd. It was directed by D. Ross Lederman from a story by Frank Howard Clark.

"Belle of the Nineties"

Mac West, now at the King's Theatre in her third Paramount starring film, "Belle of the Nineties," is a woman men like, because she is real. In his observations on the Western mode of charming, Stuart Holmes says:—"Miss West has the fundamental advantage of sex but combines it with a 'change of pace' from languidness to rapid-fire action. She uses her eyes, too, and in close association with her you cannot help but feel that she is hypnotic. It is in her intentional quality, but it is there." "Belle of the Nineties" is a story of the good old days of the Nineties, and presents Mac West as the "American Beauty" burlesque queen. Stuart Holmes is cast as the assistant to John Milian, the South's most reckless gambler. Milian, Roger Pryor and John Mack Brown are the men in her life. Mac West introduces several typical songs.

"The Midshipmaid"

Once again Jessie Matthews, who sparkled in "There Goes the Bride," has made a hit, this time in "The Midshipmaid," the feature film showing now at the Star Theatre. It is a rollicking film, and its uproarious humour has made it very popular. This story of the visit of a Naval Economist to the Fleet at Malta—sent there to keep him quiet—is full of fun and jollity. While the pompous old man is poking about, his daughter is acting the hearts of all the officers after him. To flatter him, the officers organise an amateur variety show, and a great part of the picture is devoted to the laudable entertainment provided by the lower deck. Having the appearance of being mad by amazement, the show has behind it the experience and individual cleverness which gives the necessary illusion of spontaneity to the humour. Jessie Matthews scores a great success; Fred A. Baker, the part of the pompous economist, with the beautiful daughter; the inimitable A. W. Buskett and Nigel Bruce are amazingly good, and the study of a bandmaster by Edwin Lawrence is one of the hits of the picture. "The Midshipmaid" should pack the theatre to the end of its run.

"Elmer and Esie"

The story of "Elmer and Esie," the Paramount production having its initial showing yesterday at the Queen's Theatre, deals with the problems of a typical American married couple. George Brent is seen in the leading role with Frances Fuller playing opposite him. He appears as a blustering, good-natured truck-driver

AS I SEE IT

PLAYERS' OBLIGATIONS IN TRIAL GAMES

UNFORTUNATE EFFECT OF CLASHING INTERESTS

THE clash of Interport hockey and football trials, the Triangular Hockey Tournament and the naval league and friendly sporting activities of the Colony is exercising a big strain on certain players, who have claims for recognition in all, or some of these events. This was the reason why Parker, Lt. Cdr. Nowome and Lt. Lt. Lancelot did not put in an appearance for last Sunday's hockey Interport trial. From their point of view they cannot be blamed. Parker had a very hard football match on the Saturday, and also had to take into account his expected appearance in the football Interport trial the following afternoon. Nowome and Lancelot were both concerned in two hard-going Triangular Tournament matches last week, and knew they would be required for two more this week. Hence, absence from the hockey trial.

ONE OR THE OTHER

ALBEIT, from the hockey selectors' viewpoint, their non-appearance in the trial was strongly to be deplored, and in deliberately putting other considerations before their obligations to the Hockey Association, the players might justifiably be taken as having made them of interest in being chosen for the Hockey Interport. The question seems to be, is it fair of these players to allow their names to go forward as prospective Interporters, if they find other interests more important than the trials? One can sympathise with them in so far as there is a claim of importance, but then there are other, more common knowledge, for some time, and none of the players can plead being taken by surprise. It would be as well if the players who find vital interests conflicting, would make up their minds which they intend to follow, and thus make clear their position to all parties.

WHY PINTO DID NOT PLAY

IT transpires that the reason why J. M. Pinto, originally chosen for Sunday's trial did not turn out, was that the committee put him in at outside left, where he is a right-inner. Pinto felt that he could not do justice to himself, or the team for which he had been selected, and declined to play.

DANGEROUS HABIT

THE reasons for the last-minute appearance of substitutes in so many hockey Interport trials are varied, but I am just wondering if one very important factor is not the habit of relying on the newspapers to tell them what to do. It is, I think, an undisputed fact that the Association to notify each player of his selection. The team or teams are sent to the newspapers for publication, and players are expected to read them and discover for themselves whether their names appear.

MARINES AND CLUB STAGE BATTLE IN THE MUD

Players were almost unrecognisable within a few minutes of the start of last week's rugby match between the Club and the Marines on the race course polo ground Shanghai. An unusually large crowd of spectators turned up, due to the fact that other sports fixtures had been cancelled, and saw the Club win by six points to five.

BADMINTON

Y.M.C.A. MEN'S TEAM BEATEN

Playing in the "B" Division of the men's doubles badminton league last night, the Sailors' and Soldiers' Home defeated the Y.M.C.A., by six sets to three.

The match was played at the S. and S. Home, and several close and interesting games were seen, the Y.M.C.A. showing up quite well in their first men's doubles encounter.

On Friday next, the Y.M.C.A. entertain Victoria Recreation Club in "B" Division match.

LEAGUE CRICKET

Army And Club To Meet Saturday

The Hongkong C.C. and the Army, both potential champions, will meet the First Division of the Hongkong Cricket League on Saturday afternoon at the Hongkong C.C. ground, commencing at 2 p.m.

The following have been selected to represent the Army team:

Col. E. St. G. Kirke, D.S.O.; Major V. J. Donavin (R.A.M.C.), Capt. L. J. Wach (R.A.S.C.), Lieut. C. C. Garthwaite (Royal Artillery), Lieut. J. P. Williams (East Lancashire), Lieut. the Hon. G. R. Clegg-Hill (Royal Welsh Fusiliers), Lieut. J. R. Johnson (Royal Welsh Fusiliers), Lieut. J. A. N. R. Evans (East Lancashire), Capt. S. M. J. Elvin (East Lancashire), Capt. W. H. Collett (R.A.M.C.) and Capt. D. Ballard (R.A.M.C.).

Twelfth man will be Pte. J. Dewey (Lancashire), while W. O. I. R. Jordan (Royal Engineers) will umpire and Lt. Cpl. E. H. Meadows (R.A.M.C.) will score.

TO-DAY'S TENNIS FINAL

LADIES DOUBLES AT U.S.R.C.

GOOD MATCH IS PROMISED

(By "Veritas".)

Mrs. Kayll is expected to win her second Colony title this afternoon, when she and Mrs. Parkes meet Misses R. Rumjahn and Mrs. Chui Chun-chui in the final of the open doubles championship.

The match is being played at the United Services Recreation Club, and at the conclusion, the trophies for the open singles and open doubles championships will be presented.

Mrs. Kayll and Mrs. Parkes, who are strongly favoured to win, have been playing splendid tennis right through the tournament, surviving the various stages to the final without conceding a set. They are, on form, the strongest ladies pair in the Colony.

UNEXPECTED FINALISTS

Miss Rumjahn and Mrs. Chui were surprised by eliminating the Misses Hanecek in the semi-final—but they deserved the victory, and will show stout resistance to the favourites this afternoon. They will depend chiefly on stamina from the baseline, and if they can lob with accuracy, may cause trouble.

Mrs. Kayll and Mrs. Parkes beat Mrs. Cooper and Mrs. Finlay, Miss Griffiths and Miss O. Dalziel, and Mrs. Conder and Mrs. Whitman on the way to the final, while Miss Rumjahn and Mrs. Chui overcame Mrs. Woods and Mrs. Landolt, and the Misses R. and H. Hancock.

MIXED DOUBLES TIE

Further progress in the open mixed doubles championship will be made this afternoon, when at the Chinese Recreation Club, L. Goldman and Miss R. Hancock meet Captain E. Manners and Mrs. Grimes in the semi-final.

The winners earn the right of playing H. D. Rumjahn and Mrs. Chui Chun-chui in the final.

Despite the slight success gained by Captain Manners and Mrs. Grimes over E. C. Fincher and Miss Olive Dalziel last week, it is not generally expected that they will obtain the better of Goldman and Miss Rosamund Hancock, who are playing extraordinarily well together, and are favourites for the title. Nevertheless it should be a game well worth watching.

HIGH PRAISE FOR CONTESTANTS

More Impressive Boxing By A. B. Dawson

TEAM COMPETITION WON BY SUFFOLK

(By L. H. B.)

Fought in the presence of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief of the China Fleet, Admiral Sir Frederic Dreyer, K.C.B., C.B.E., at the China Fleet Club last night the finals of the China Fleet Amateur Boxing Championships and Team Competition provided a fine display of keen and hard fighting.

Admiral Dreyer who presented the trophies thanked Captain Redman and his staff who arranged the competition and the contestants for a splendid evening's entertainment and said that the fighting had been keen and hard; moreover it should be noticed that no less than six boys and four ordinary seamen had entered the championships and been matched against far more experienced men.

Admiral Dreyer who presented the trophies thanked Captain Redman and his staff who arranged the competition and the contestants for a splendid evening's entertainment and said that the fighting had been keen and hard; moreover it should be noticed that no less than six boys and four ordinary seamen had entered the championships and been matched against far more experienced men.

Boy Nicholson (Hermes) who won the light heavyweight division, said Sir Frederic was deserving of special mention for his fine performance.

The fight for the heavy weight title between Marine Foster and Leading Seaman Swan lacked the interest of many of the otherights, for the men were by no means evenly matched and Foster, after showing himself the superior man in the first round, was able to defeat the aggressive tactics of Swan in the second round and carry the attack into the enemy's camp. In the third round Foster was definitely the superior boxer and landed some very heavy blows and remained to attack.

THE RESULTS

Results of the finals were as follows:

Heavyweight: A. B. Wilkinson (Adventure) beat Stoker Ryan (Berwick) on points.

Light-heavy: Cpl. Fitzgerald (Kent) beat Boy Nicholson (Hermes) on points.

Lightweight: Marine Olliver (Adventure) beat Stoker Flotilla on points.

Middleweight: A. B. Dawson (Dorset Flotilla) beat Stoker Flotilla on points.

Welterweight: Stoker Flotilla beat Aircraftman Killick (Hermes) on points.

Lightweight: Marine Foster (Berwick) beat Leading Seaman Swan (Kent) on points.

Heavyweight: Ordinary Seaman Tuck (Suffolk) beat B. Morrissey (Dorset Flotilla) on points.

Welterweight: B. O'Connell (Suffolk) beat Bay King (Adventure) in the second round.

Team competition: H.M.S. Suffolk (29 points), H.M.S. Berwick (28), H.M.S. Adventure (24), H.M.S. Kent (22), 8th Destroyer Flotilla (24), H.M.S. Hermes (17), H.M.S. Tamar and Small Ships (8).

DON BRADMAN GOES HOMEFinal Chat With Mr. Churchill

(By Tom Clarke)

Don Bradman, the Australian Test batsman, and his wife left London for Australia yesterday.

Bradman, most retiring of celebrities, did his best to escape unobserved. Only four or five of his intimate friends, together with Mr. Findlay, Secretary of the M.C.C., were at Victoria to see him off.

Then the arrival of Mr. Winston Churchill caused a new stir. He and his daughter had come to see Mrs. Churchill off to the Continent.

The silk-hatted station-master came up to Bradman and said Mr. Churchill would like to meet him. So Don was led off.

Cricketers and politicians chatted for a few moments, and Mrs. Churchill and her daughter joined in.

APPENDIX "NUISANCE"

Bradman was looking very well. He had almost recovered from his severe operation.

He has read with interest the news that certain of his colleagues are "through" with big cricket, but has no intention of following their example yet. He laughingly says that he wants to see what he will be able to do with the bat now he is rid of his nuisance of an appendix.

Bradman will not play in Australia this season, but he will probably be available when the Australia XI. sails for South Africa next October.

The secrecy of Bradman's movements since the arrival of his wife has been due to a desire to see England quietly, which, says Bradman, is impossible during the distractions of a Test tour.

Their secret tour included two days with the Duke of Portland at Welbeck Abbey, and while in this neighbourhood they met the Duke of Kent.

Pack in London for the past fortnight they have succeeded in losing themselves twice in their long walks abroad and have been grateful for rescue by

The ubiquitous motor-omnibus, Mrs. Bradman has been thrilled by the London shops.

Incidentally, she has wondered if Australian women have bigger heads than English women, as she found considerable difficulty in buying a hat large enough to fit her.

"What are you taking back?" a friend asked Mrs. Bradman as the train was about to start.

She glanced at the English robes pinned to her grey squirrel coat, and then at her husband.

"Him," she said, pulling him up the steps.

SERIAL STORY—Lovable

By MARY RAYMOND

BEGIN HERE TO-DAY

ANN HOLLISTER, pretty and 20, finds work in a library, like falls in love with TONY MICKLE, though warning against him by her room-mate, SALLY KENDALL, who is a widow and prominent and engaged to VALERIA BENNETT, society girl. Through Peter's knowledge, Valeria goes about with a man she is not engaged to, which a man she is not. Peter, learning how Peter has deceived him, tells her their engagement is at an end.

She goes to Tony, who is Peter's friend, and discloses their mutual unhappiness. When he asks her to marry him she agrees. They are married that night and set out for Florida.

The first day after their arrival there Ann falls from an aquaplane. Peter is shocked and is disturbed much by how little he is attracted by his pretty "friend wife."

CHAPTER XVI

Ann went to her room, undressed and got in bed. The day that had started out well had gone flat, somehow.

Downstairs Peter smoked several cigarettes. He heard Ann's light steps above as she moved about the room. Finally, all was still. He got up then and went upstairs. Ann heard his door open and close. After a little she was asleep.

She slept deeply, restfully, until suddenly she was wide awake. A shriek, a wild yell that shattered the stillness brought her to a sitting position.

"Peter! Peter!"

Almost instantly the door was flung open and Peter was silhouetted there in his dark robe. He came over to her bed.

"Ann, what in the world—were you screaming?"

"No, of course not."

He sat down on the bed. Then they heard the shriek again.

"Peter, what is it?" She was clinging to him.

"It sounds like the devil—like hell's turned loose," Peter said. He gently disengaged her arms and stood up.

"Get up and lock your door, Ann, while I have a look around. Probably some practical joke."

"I'm going to," Ann reached for her negligee at the foot of the bed.

If Peter were going to do an insane, foolhardy thing like looking around, she would be right behind him.

But just as Peter's hand touched the key in the front door a voice called, "Mr. Peter, please!"

Peter flung the door wide. "Juan, you little devil!"

The small boy stood grinning, pleased with the excitement he had caused. Ann laughed hysterically, and a pair of extra trousers for Sam and Carl.

The Italian woman and her husband followed them to the door, talking volubly. This had been one of their biggest days. Truly, these tourists spent freely.

Three weeks passed swiftly, and still Peter and nothing about returning. They had driven to Tampico, where Ann was fascinated with Ybor

City, the colourful and interesting Latin settlement. They had driven across Gandy bridge to St. Petersburg, which Ann said was like a little girl dressed up for a party—so orderly and clean, with the attractive houses set on green, green lawns. They drove to Sarasota for turf bathing, and one day Peter had gone tarpon fishing.

That was a long day for Ann, and she had run out to meet his car. "I thought you would never get home. Where are the fish?"

"Little sister ver' sick. Can't get her breath good."

"Good heavens," said Peter. "Why didn't you say so? Ann, we'll have to go over."

Ann nodded. "It sounds like cramp. I'll get the mustard." She flew to the kitchen.

They followed closely on Juan's heels—Ann with her travelling coat buttoned over her gown, Peter in his enveloping robe. Peter's feet were shod, his socksless. Ann's bare feet were in white sandals.

Sam had gone for a doctor. Lena told them that the baby's breathing was much worse. They had become frightened and sent Juan for help.

It was cramp, Ann had guessed. Lena had never heard of it before but she was fairly adept in helping Ann with the plaster and melting vaseline which was on hand for bruises and sores.

It was an all-night vigil. Ann and Peter stayed until the doctor arrived and the little patient's breathing became more natural, and she had dropped into sleep.

"Stay with Marie, Lena," Mr.

Kendall and I will get our own breakfast," Ann said.

Peter thought that was kind of Ann. He thought, too, that he had never seen her look as sweet as she had when she was stooping over the curly-haired Rosalie, gently loosening Rosalie's gown at the throat and deftly smoothing the plaster on the small chest. Ann had looked like a child, herself, with her bronze hair tumbling over the dark coat.

"I'll get breakfast and you take your steaks, as Juan would call it, before luncheon," Peter suggested on the way back. "Tired, Ann?"

"Not much," she answered sturdily.

"Peter, isn't it pathetic how little Sam and Lena know about raising children?"

"Pretty ignorant, but still Juan and little Rosalie look fairly healthy."

"It was just a rag Rosalie was wearing."

"Would you like to drive to town and get her some things?"

Ann looked at him. It was positively uncanny how he read her mind.

"I'd love to, and I don't need any 'sickies,'"

"Not if it's a beauty sleep," Peter said.

It was his first compliment. Ann found herself flushing.

If Peter had admired Ann's efficiency in the sick room, she marvelled over Peter, moying easily about the small kitchen, handling pots and pans as though he knew what to do with them.

"Peter, what can't you do?"

"Think I'd tell you?"

Ann laughed. She was feeling very contented this morning. All the trouble of the night before was gone. She and Peter were friends again. After breakfast, they drove to town where Ann shopped for an hour. Peter watching and occasionally making suggestions.

"What size?" the Italian store-keeper asked.

"About this big," Peter stretched out his arms to an approximate measurement of Rosalie's short body.

"What age is your little girl?"

"Three," Ann guessed hastily.

"Like the father, perhaps?" the woman queried, with an admiring look at Peter.

"No," Peter answered, firmly.

"Like her mother. Exactly."

"Juan, what do you mean by yelling like a bird?"

"Mr. Peter, please, I knock and nobody hear me. So I cry like a bird."

"Like a devil bird," said Juan.

"Can you beat it?" Peter said, lost in admiration of Juan's prowess for a moment. "I can truthfully say that I never heard anything as devilish as that."

"I committe fine," Juan said.

"You do," Peter said, "but—why the midnight call, Juan?"

"Little sister ver' sick. Can't get her breath good."

"Good heavens," said Peter. "Why didn't you say so? Ann, we'll have to go over."

Ann nodded. "It sounds like cramp. I'll get the mustard." She flew to the kitchen.

"I thought you would never get home. Where are the fish?"

"Where are the fish?" Will you listen to me? Did you expect me to bring a 93 pound tarpon home?"

"I didn't!"

"We did. It was a tough battle. Allen had his picture made with it."

"Why didn't you?"

"I thought you'd take my word for it."

NAVAL BELLS

COLOURFUL CEREMONY AT CATHEDRAL

A naval wedding of great interest was celebrated yesterday afternoon at St. John's Cathedral, when Miss Mary Adelaide Norah Whitham was married to Lieut. John David Luce, of H. M. S. Medway.

The Very Rev. Dean Swann and the Naval Chaplain, the Rev. J. Evans, officiated at the ceremony.

The bride is the younger daughter of the late Mr. R. P. Whitham and Mrs. Whitham, while the bridegroom is the second son of the late Admiral John Luce, C.B., and Mrs. Luce, of Little Cheverell House, Devizes, Wiltshire, England.

The bride, who entered the Cathedral on the arm of her brother, Mr. J. P. Whitham, wore a "Chiffon" satin wedding gown and carried a sheaf of white gladioli. Her long tulle train was held by little Miss Jennifer Booth, dressed in white with gold slippers and little gold lace cap.

Three Bridesmaids

Attending the bride were her sister, Miss Mina Whitham (chief bridesmaid) and the Misses Potter. They wore "Eunice" green Tudor style velvet gowns with gold lace caps and twisted golden girdles. They carried bouquets of orange and yellow African daisies.

The stately interior of the Cathedral, decorated with palms and masses of pink and white gladioli, made a perfect setting for the picturesque bridal group.

The wedding ceremony was choral, the congregation joining in the singing of "Jesus, Lover of my Soul," "He who would valiant be," and "Now thank we all our God." Mr. Frederick Mason was at the organ.

The duties of best man were undertaken by Lieut. Waller, of H. M. S. Oswald.

Archway of Swords

After the signing of the Register, the bride and bridegroom left the Cathedral under an archway of swords presented by brother officers.

They entered the wedding car which was drawn to H. M. S. Tamar, for the reception, by blue-jackets from H. M. S. Osiris.

The happy couple leave this morning for the North on the Empress of Russia.

It will be recalled by many Hongkong people that the bride-

Generalissimo's Plans

Shanghai, Jan. 16. General Chiang Kai-shek and his wife are planning to fly to Nanking to-morrow morning.

An unconfirmed report states that the Generalissimo has expressed the desire for Hu Han-min's return to Nanking to Liu Lu-yin, Hu's representative at Shanghai.

Dr. Wang Chung-hui's departure for The Hague has been postponed until February 13, when he will sail by the Conte Verde, and intends visiting Hu in Hongkong.

Dr. H. H. Kung is not leaving for the South until late in March.—Reuter.

SANITARY BOARD

WONG KWONG-TIN ELECTED FOR THREE MORE YEARS

It was announced at yesterday's meeting of the Sanitary Board that Mr. Wong Kwong-tin had been re-elected a member of the Sanitary Board for further term of three years. Other business was formal.

At the meeting were Mr. W. J. Carrie (President), Hon. Mr. R. M. Henderson (Vice-President), Dr. G. W. Pope (Medical Officer of Health), Dr. Li Shu-fan, Messrs. M. K. Lo, F. C. Hull, Wong Kwong-tin, C. J. Roe (Secretary) and Mr. Ping-teung (Assistant Secretary).

groom was on board the s.s. Shun-tien last year when she was pirated, on June 18, after leaving Tientsin on her way to Chefoo and Shanghai.

Lieut. Luce and P. L. Field were returning to Weihaiwei on the ship after a visit to Peking. Together with several other passengers, Lt. Luce was kidnapped and held as a hostage. The captives were later pushed off in sampans by the pirates and Lt. Luce, together with Lt. Field and Messrs. Brand and Watson, was picked up by H. M. destroyer Whitham and taken to Chefoo.

Both vessels were able to proceed to Canton, where they discharged their passengers and cargo. The Tin Yat arrived back here on Monday afternoon and went into dry dock at the Kowloon yards, and the Lee Hong arrived yesterday afternoon and proceeded to the Kwong Fook Cheung yards, where she was recently built.

Actual War Scenes in
"Forgotten Men"

"Forgotten Men," a film of the war, all the scenes of which are authentic, and, with a few exceptions, have never before been seen by the public, was privately shown in London recently.

The film depicts the fighting on land, sea, and in the air, and the audience is spared nothing of its horrors. Soldiers are seen in the act of bayoneting others, or pitching forward on their faces as the shells burst or the machine-guns bullets go home. Aeroplanes are filmed as they dive to their destruction, and ships torpedoed by the Germans rear up as if in agony as they sink.

The mud of Passchendaele, the tortured trees of the Somme, the blasted sides of the wall of rock which was the scene of the Italian campaign, and the flat wastes of the Russian front are all depicted with soldiers in the act of killing or being killed.

If the censor passes it, the film will be shown publicly in London soon.

The material has been assembled by British International Pictures from films actually taken at the front by British, French, German, Russian, and Italian cameramen between 1914 and 1918. General Sir Ian Hamilton speaks a short prologue, and Sir John Hammerton provides a running commentary, with occasional help from various V.C.s and other war veterans. They are shown grouped in a room, listening to Sir John's remarks, and every now and then one of them is asked to describe a personal experience.

Two German ex-soldiers contribute to the commentary, and there is a suggestion throughout that war hatreds should now be forgotten.

Whether or not the film will altogether fulfil its intended purpose as a powerful argument for pacifism, a generation too young to remember the War will, at least, be able to see a good many grisly scenes that actually happened, and to gain some idea of what fighting was like on the various fronts. The producer, however, rightly recognises that the film is not suitable for children, and it will be shown with an accompanying warning to this effect.

THE COMING OF COLOUR

Colour has arrived in films, both in London and in Hollywood.

A new film, "Radio Parade of 1935," produced by British International Pictures at Elstree, has introduced 1,000 feet of Dufay-colour.

Radio pictures in Hollywood are now making "Becky Sharp," with Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Miriam Hopkins, and Nigel Bruce, entirely in colour.

Merian C. Cooper is preparing an all-colour version of "The Last Days of Pompeii," to be followed by "The Three Musketeers," starring Francis Lederer.

Technicolor is also to be used in the filming of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," which Max Reinhardt is producing for Warners; while the American millionaire, John Hay Whitney, has announced that he will invest £1,400,000 in making nine films in Technicolor in the next two years.

In London the owners of Dufay-colour are already making preparations for the production of a full-length film of the Royal Silver Jubilee celebrations next May.

London Film Production have laid plans for the making of "Lawrence of Arabia" in Colour-gravure, which it is hoped will be

BRIBERY LUNCHES IN BUSINESS

BAD EXAMPLE SET BY SOCIAL CLIMBERS

"FEEDING THE LIONS"

BY OSCAR MILLARD

FEEDING the "lions" has long been a recognised means for the social climber to achieve recognition. It would seem, however, that this abusive use of the invitation to luncheon or dinner is becoming widespread in business life, and has come to be considered by many firms as legitimate and effective bait for business men.

Numerous firms which depend largely on personal contact between their outside staff and the executives of business houses encourage their representatives to invite potential clients to lunch, for the purpose of carrying on selling talk with the biscuits and cheese. To this end the firms allocate comparatively large sums to "entertainment expenses" in their advertising appropriations. And their representatives make a living by lunching instead of by straightforward salesmanship.

This gastronomical guile is known as psychological salesmanship, and is based on the belief that a man always feels more kindly disposed towards his fellows, and is therefore, more amenable to persuasion, after a good meal than on an empty stomach.

MEN WHO REFUSE

Sure in the case of dyspeptics with whom such methods might well be disastrous—there is, no doubt, much truth in this age-old axiom. But is the corollary deduced from it really sound busi-

The secretary of the head buyer in one of the biggest firms in the country told me that until the novelty wore off and slimming became imperative, "she had the time of her life. It was known among the travellers that "the boat" was somewhat choleric dyspeptic approachable only by his secretary, who, in fact, did the major part of the buying. And never a day passed without her receiving an invitation to lunch at some smart restaurant.

Needless to say, these psychological salesmen carefully avoided talking business during the meal, endeavouring rather to give the impression that they invited her solely for the pleasure of her company. Though not unattractive, this girl was perfectly level-headed and a keener business woman than many of the travellers imagined. None of them ever got an order he would not have otherwise received without the expensive lunch, and several did not get orders after too strenuous efforts to make themselves agreeable.

THEY CELEBRATE LATER

Abrad, where palm-oil in some form or other plays a preponderant part in salesmanship, the invitation to lunch is not effective and is seldom received. Very wisely the foreigner considers that eating is a full-time job, and the surest way of offending him is to talk too much during a meal.

It may be noticed that most men lunch alone in Paris, even though on leaving the office they may have had the "aperitif" together. And when it comes to business the usual thing is to do the talking over the "aperitif" and, if the deal is a big one, celebrate it over a bottle of champagne later in the day. But of recent years they have adopted the phrase "Business is business," and as a general rule the ordinary run of business is done in the office.

It might perhaps be well if salesmen remembered that Britain originated that phrase, and that the great majority of British business men prefer to act upon it.

LUXURY SPENDING

SURE SIGN OF BETTER TIMES

New York, Jan. 9.

"Luxury spending" is becoming more noticeable in the United States and is aiding industry, reports of various business groups indicate.

This grouping includes everything from the baby's doll to the palatial yacht and some place in between in fine furs—and all trade organisations report an increase.

Reports to the Secretary of Commerce, Mr. Daniel C. Roper, by business leaders indicate that sales in some gift lines last year were 40 per cent greater than in 1933.

The toy industry has had a good year. Domestic toy manufacturers this season had a turnover of more than $200,000,000, an increase of about 10 per cent over 1933.

Another interesting point is that there was a 50 per cent increase in toy design last year. Streamlined trains, taking their guidance from the new skyrocketing trains on the major lines, are in profusion in the toy shops. Aeroplanes of advanced models, new boat designs, new mechanical toys and games galore—some of which already have made remarkable strides in popularity mainly because of the "recovery" motif are being sold.

Indicative of American spending is the fact that amusement tax revenues are growing sharply, mainly from theatres.

One major company is sponsoring a revival of interest in billiards, by dint of sending out players, and expects to create 5,000,000 new players during the year 1935.—United Press.

Stricken with a heart attack, Mr. George Bernard Shaw, world-famous playwright, has been confined to his bed at his home in London, and is receiving medical attention. His attending physician, who described the attack as "not serious," said the 78-year-old author had been overworking.

Do business men prefer discussing their work over a table in a restaurant rather than at the desk in their own office?

I have put the question to several executives in different classes of business. And from their replies it would seem clear that they heartily dislike the practice.

Many men have made it a rule always to refuse lunch invitations from strangers. Apart from the fact that they look to the lunch hour for relaxation and therefore do not want to take their business to the table, they resent the implied suggestion concealed in the casual phrase "Let's talk it over at lunch." And even when this invitation is accepted, the recipients are never blind to the selling hook lurking in their lunch.

If only for health reasons many men avoid lunch invitations, even from their friends. For the tendency is to eat lightly at mid-day, and when one is invited to lunch by a man who is out to make himself agreeable it usually means a heavy meal—with the inevitable sluggishness that follows for the rest of the afternoon.

WOMEN SECRETARIES

This subtle form of corruption is employed widely with women secretaries known to have influence over the chief's decisions. In their fatuity many men believe that a fancy lunch and a few boxes of chocolates will work wonders on a woman. They do not seem to realise that if a woman can hold down a job in which her judgment counts she is most probably smarter than a man would be at seeing a book in the bath.

Another actress from England has risen to stardom in foreign lands. Above is pictured Nova Pilbeam, 14 year old actress, who was born in Nova Scotia, Canada, and named after the land of her birth. ELECTRIC IMPULSE FROM THE BRAIN amazing experiments is Dr. E. D. Adrian, university lecturer in physiology here and Foulerton Professor of the Royal Society. He is working in association with Mr. Brian Matthews, of King's College, who has elaborated the necessary apparatus.

"Dr. Adrian," says Professor Joseph Barcroft, Professor of Physiology at Cambridge, "has been the malingerer for many years of the investigation of the mysteries of the nervous system."

Dr. Adrian, the professor went on to explain, has demonstrated that when the mind was quiescent—as with a man seated in an armchair, with eyes closed, thinking of nothing in particular—there was a regular discharge of electrical impulses from the brain at the rate of about 10 a second.

"If the subject opens his eyes and concentrates his attention the impulses jump to about 2,000 a second."

"The greater part of the brain appears to be inactive in any mental process."

Professor Barcroft added that Dr. Adrian has discovered the nature of the messages to the brain: On the long wave emanating from the brain in repose there was superimposed the thought wave due to physical sensation or mental concentration. These thought waves varied in intensity and frequency.

Like gigantic mushrooms, tremendous circular flats like these will be erected throughout England in a new era of housing projects. There will be a circular courtyard in the ten-storey cylinder and 160 families may be accommodated. A spend-thrift window arrangement insures maximum of sunlight. The flats, which are built 20 per cent cheaper than those of ordinary type, are designed to furnish Britain's solution of her a sun clearance problem.

FAILURE TO PAY WAGES

MUI-TSAI CASE IN COURT

A nominal fine of $10 was imposed by Mr. W. Schofield at the Central Magistracy this morning on Chan Hung-shi, a married woman of No. 70 Queen's Road West, who was summoned for failing to pay wages to a registered maid-servant Shin Mul, aged 16.

Mr. Hin-shing Lo appeared on behalf of the defendant and entered a plea of guilty to a technical offence. He explained that defendant had been in charge of the girl for several years, and since her registration at the S.C.A., her parents in the country had instructed the defendant to withhold her wages until she was married. At her marriage, her wages would be paid over to her as her marriage portion.

The girl was betrothed to a man, who recently wanted to take the girl out. This was refused on one occasion and he was the man responsible for the matter being brought to the attention of the S.C.A.

The girl was very well treated by the defendant and as far as she herself was concerned she was quite happy. However, the defendant now wished to restore the girl to her parents or to anybody whom the S.C.A. might appoint.

Inspector Fraser stated that the amount owing to the girl was $65.55, over a period of four years, seven months and 10 days.

Mr. Lo said this money would be paid by the defendant.

Helps You Escape Many Colds Altogether

VICKS VA-TRO-NOL* is amazingly successful!

QUICK!—At that first nasal irritation,
a sniffle or sneeze—just a few drops of Va-tro-nol. Used in time, it aids in preventing many colds.

Already, millions of families have found the way to fewer colds with this remarkable aid in preventing colds—Vicks Va-tro-nol.

Va-tro-nol is especially designed for the nose and throat—where most colds start. It aids and stimulates the functions provided by Nature—in the nose—to prevent colds, and to throw off colds in their early stages.

Where irritation has led to a clogged-up nose
(a stuffy head cold or nasal catarrh) Va-tro-nol penetrates deep into the nasal passages—reduces swollen membranes—clears away clogging mucus —brings comforting relief.

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 16, 1935.

AFTER THE SAAR PLEBISCITE

By an overwhelming vote, Saarlanders have voted for the return of their territory to Germany. The result should be a further contribution to the peace of Europe; had the plebiscite gone otherwise, the political life of the Continent would have been charged with dangerous possibilities. As events have turned out, expectations have been fulfilled, for it had long since been conceded that the vote would favour Germany. Even the most ardent Franco-philics saw no hope that the area, which is inherently German in custom, language and sympathy, would vote for allegiance to France; while the third alternative, continuance under League of Nations administration, never promised anything approaching serious support. Now that the issue has been decided, the fact has to be faced that behind the political difficulties and the technical question of the ownership of the Saar mines, there lies a larger economic problem. The Saar cannot exist with an economy dependent on either France or Germany alone. In exchange for its coal, it must obtain ore from Lorraine, while a large share of its steel and iron products must find their outlet in markets controlled by Germany. Moreover, the Saar continues to be fifth on the list of purchasers of French exports. Thus the future stability of the region depends upon the ability of France and Germany to agree upon lines of commercial policy that will avoid one of the greatest of post-war errors, namely, the attempt to transform national borders into economic boundaries. In proportion as the Saar vote becomes the forerunner of a measure of economic collaboration will the complex problem of this diminutive but important region approach solution. Happily, there have been signs latterly of better Franco-German feeling. Since M. Laval's assumption of the Foreign Ministry in succession to M. Barthou, there have been notable changes in the methods, if not the direction, of French-foreign policy, particularly in respect of Germany.

The Laval way seems to be to allay passions, to avoid extremes. In some quarters, his methods have come in for sharp criticism, but whilst it may still be doubted whether he will be able to put an end to the fears and suspicions of Germany which have influenced French policy for so long, he may none the less apply the brakes to a movement which was fast carrying France to a rupture with Germany. There are two courses open to French diplomacy. One assumes the implacability of German hostility, and, believing that no concessions, no proclamations of friendship will change things, would pursue the policy of alliances and armaments. The other assumes the possibility of improving Franco-German relations, and would, therefore, seek arrangements towards that end. The trouble hitherto has been that France had often appeared to waver between these two conceptions. With the major issue of the future status of the Saar out of the way, the prospect is opened up for a much-needed rapprochement. That accomplished, the future peace of Europe should be assured for many years to come.

"We shall be 'all-electric,'" says Christopher Stone, "one century from now. In a recent film it was indicated that in ten years we shall have combined wireless telephones and televisions in everyday use. If this is going to happen in ten years, and remembering what has happened in the past ten years, how shall I date what shall be a century hence? No, I can merely indicate the general trend of the way things will probably go," he adds.

In my own field one thing is certain. The circular gramophone disc will go. It will be replaced by some kind of sound-on-film system in a long roll, corresponding very closely to the manuscript rolls we had in the early days of writing. Thus there will be no need to break up a symphony into twelve equal parts and jump up to turn the record at each part until the effect of the music is ruined twelve different times.

We shall just sit still and do nothing, as the fortunate possessors of gramophones which automatically change the records are able to do to-day.

Also, I see much in the portable set. At all probability the fundamental system underlying this idea will be expanded until every radio will be expanded until every radio gramophone—there will be no more separate radio receivers or gramophones—will be all-electric, with aerial or earth, and equipped with television apparatus by which we shall see studio programmes, current events, or the latest films, according to the alternative programme we select—there will be dozens from which to choose. But we shall probably have these things within thirty years, and they may be anticipated before 2034.

Before care-free wireless sets can become universal, however, every country will have to be "electrified." Several European countries are still relying on gas for their main power, so there is still much to be done.

"We shall have real broadcasting," says Signor Arturo Toscanini. "Broadcasting certainly has done a lot in its fourteen years of life, but I am not altogether sure that its work has been 'to the good,' he goes on.

In the world of music radio has done nothing but separate the heart of music from its body. At the moment you cannot hear an orchestra through a loud speaker. You merely hear a tune—a very, very different thing. The ordinary loud speaker of to-day has no more to do with true music than has a hurdy-gurdy.

It is hoped, however, that within a century much change will have been wrought. Broadcasting on the Continent and in America must be freed from the chains both of State and of advertising which encompass it. If I had my way, every broadcasting station should be ruled by a selected body of musicians, dramatists, and other satellites of the creative arts.

Eventually a perfect loud speaker will be invented, and then every sphere of human activity, the placing of each separate brick on the wall of civilisation, will be broadcast from one station or another.

Not a public event but will be described to listeners, not a concert that will not be overheard by the microphone, not a single speech of note that will not be followed by millions.

There will be no studios as we know them. Every place will be

Wireless tends to standardise English. Even at the present time we have many Continental stations giving frequent announcements in your language, and more people are learning it every day. With the advent of broadcasting over three hundred million people have come within common touch.

This was inevitable. Certain languages must disappear and must give way to English in the same way as the language of Brittany once gave way to the language of the French and is now little heard.

French itself is losing the footing it has long had as an international language, the language of diplomacy. English is replacing

it. Similarly, the Bulgarian and Serbian languages are marked out for death. Radio is the murderer.

Yes, in a hundred years' time

we shall all speak one language;

the "outlandish" tongue of "the foreigner" will have disappeared.

BROADCASTING ONE CENTURY HENCE

adapted to the microphone, and the broadcasting headquarters will be occupied only by programme originators and engineers.

"War will have been abolished," says Vernon Bartlett. "And continues: I believe that the discovery of wireless will prove to be much more important than that of printing. With its help, in a hundred years, war will certainly have disappeared; this method of settling disputes has long since ceased to be profitable, for the means of waging war has become so expensive that both victor and vanquished are ruined by it.

But misunderstanding, fear, and distrust have often proved more powerful than common sense. In a hundred years we shall, I suppose, have such a development of wireless communications that even the most remote parts of the world will be at least as well known to us as our next door neighbours are to-day.

Propaganda will be useless as a method of working up the feelings of one nation against another. Indeed, I doubt if nations as we know them to-day will still exist, because we shall have rid ourselves of the barrier of languages.

Some international tongue will be universally spoken in Latin was spoken by the relatively few educated people in the Middle Ages, and we shall not think of a German or a Russian or a Siamese as being much more of a stranger than a man of to-day who comes from some other part of the British Isles and speaks a different dialect.

In all this the League of Nations (as the political organisation) aviation (as the quickest means of transport), and broadcasting in all its form (as the most effective method of exchanging ideas) will play a very important part. In fact, without broadcasting, I doubt if the ideal of close political co-operation between all nations could possibly be achieved.

"Foreign languages will be unknown," says M. E. M. Stephan. I agree with Mr. Bartlett. Solely through the tremendous power of broadcasting, I believe that long before another century has passed, perhaps within fifty or sixty years, we shall see an international language.

This will be based on a mixture of English and American, varied in different countries, only according to the accent of the country concerned. Thus some of the outrageous slang terms of the present will be respectable words in the future, he states.

Wireless tends to standardise the truth must be told: we were a champion prancer—we mean dancer—in our time. That was before good, living and H.K. beer had begun to lay a heavy hand on us.

We had those broad shoulders, and until the hump in our chest shifted to a lower position—the slender waist and swiftness and stream-line form indispensable to a champ.

We were the cynosure of all eyes the first time we appeared. The girls instantly fell for us, and we fell on the floor in our anxiety not to disappoint them.

It may be said that right away we got rhythm, and from that day our life was just one song and dance.

From making a mis-step we finally made a mis-step and suffered a fall from which we have never recovered.

We married Mrs. Bogg who at the former Miss Hogg, had gone to most of our dances.

You will here remark, what could have made a better partnership than the harmony-making union of Hogg with a Bogg? But strange as it may seem, Fate here willed otherwise.

From that moment instead of "leading" in the partnership, we found we were being led. Miss Bogg has also been calling the tune and setting the step.

Two things were left to us to choose. Writing the Memoirs of Bogg the Incomparable Dancer, taking to drink.

We elected the latter course being the safer with Mrs. Bogg still actively about. "Doddling old fool," we have heard her say, tartly, when we broached our intended literary project to her.

And so it is, Girls, that you see what you now see, a wreck of our former terpsichorean self. We admit it seemed unbelievable that in it could have at one time dwelt the terpsichorean soul of a great Bogg.

We were, in short, the fad of the Early Nineties.

Still, you can come up and see us sometime.

The Very Idea!

WE SHAKE A LEG
By Horatio ("Sneaky") Bogg

A sensation has been raised by us inadvertently appearing as a judge in the Dance Competitions. Some who still doubt our capability, have gone so far as to hint that as far as shaking a leg is concerned we cannot tell a quick-step from a mis-step, or a mis-step from a stumble.

This is gratuitous opinion to be treated with the deep contempt it deserves, but since the point has been raised, we feel we must do something about it, if only to preserve our reputation as a man-about-town.

Certainly not of our own volition that the honour of being a judge came to us. In fact, it was thrust on us through a combination of circumstances. What these were, need not be gone into here, save that when we made a ceremonious, unexpected and dramatic entry into the Garden in the midst of the competitions, the effect was what might have been expected.

"Good old Bogg!" "Dear Mr. Bogg!" came a unanimous chorus of greeting.

A whisper went round that the great Mr. Bogg whose knowledge was incomparable in dancing matters, had descended to grace the event with his presence, and furthermore, had consented, but only after much persuasion, to preside as a judge.

Our usual quick intelligence grasped the situation. It demanded the exercise we could set of three great qualities, to wit, a perfect composure, a judicial dignity with impartiality, and that indefinable something known as "it".

With these three qualities our great and admiring public have informed us we are richly endowed. On this special occasion we managed to combine them in a charming way.

Nor can you say of us that we are not conversant with the essentials of that which we were supposed to judge.

You may say of us that we truth must be told: we were a champion prancer—we mean dancer—in our time. That was before good, living and H.K. beer had begun to lay a heavy hand on us.

We had those broad shoulders, and until the hump in our chest shifted to a lower position—the slender waist and swiftness and stream-line form indispensable to a champ.

DOLLARS FLOWING NORTH

MOVEMENT OUT OF HONGKONG
CHINA BANKS BUYING

The steamers Empress of Russia of the Canadian Pacific Line and the President Taft of the Dollar Line, which sailed for Shanghai this morning, carried slightly in excess of $800,000 (Chinese standard dollars) shipped by the Bank of China and the Bank of Communications who are buying in Hongkong approximately $20,000,000, with a view to relieving the tight money situation which has prevailed recently in Shanghai, a United Press correspondent here says.

The P. and O. steamer Rawalpindi, which arrived at Shanghai Sunday last, carried slightly more than $500,000 comprising the first shipment made by the Bank of China since inaugurating its present buying programme.

Rumours regarding the amount of the initial shipment, circulating here and in Shanghai yesterday, placed the value considerably lower than the accurate figure, due possibly to the fact that each of the cases used by the Bank of China in the present shipment contains $6,000 instead of $5,000, which is the contents of the ordinary Shanghai shipping case.

In circles usually well-informed, it is learned that before the close of business yesterday the Bank of China in Hongkong had accumulated more than $1,000,000, in addition to the amounts already shipped, but that lack of time prevented this from being sent by either of the steamers leaving today. This amount is almost certain to be shipped by the steamer President McKinley of the Dollar Line, sailing from Hongkong for Shanghai January 18.

Indications in financial circles here to-day are that each fast steamer sailing from Hongkong for some time to come will carry approximately $500,000 consigned to Shanghai.

Mr. S. J. Chen, Manager of the Bank of China in Hongkong who is handling the purchase of some $20,000,000 for shipment to Shanghai, declined to make any statement on the subject.

side of the Ministry of Propaganda offices.

The German Minister said that Mr. Knox's emigrants had made him look ridiculous. He had only one task left, and that is, if ridiculous can kill, to dig mass graves for Swiss emigrants.

Dr. Goebbel concluded with a lyrical appeal for peace.

PARIS UNEASY

There is a certain amount of apprehension in Paris. Relief at the result of the Star voting is qualified in the French capital by the reflection that it will strengthen Herr Hitler's position at home, and probably stimulate dynamic energy in foreign affairs, which may lead to Nazi ferment in Austria.

Le Temps, the prominent Paris newspaper, says the situation demands great prudence, and France, Great Britain and Italy should show a united front to Hitlerite Germany.—Reuter.

BRITISH OPINION

London, Jan. 16. The general view taken in British circles with regard to the Saar Plebiscite result is that, quite apart from every other consideration, the emphatic nature of the vote has definitely simplified the situation.

British interest in the Saar has naturally been considerably increased by the leading role which British troops have taken in the measures for ensuring the maintenance of order there, and it is with considerable gratification that British opinion notes the absence hitherto of any serious disorder.

Some anxious days still remain, but there is increasing confidence that these will pass in comparative peace.

There seems little doubt that the decision of the Council, by which the Saar territory will be reunited to Germany, will in fact now be little more than a formality. The main point that remains to be decided is the length of the interregnum required to enable the transfer to take place.

SOME OF THE PROBLEMS
Certain matters which have to be done will require time. For example, the Customs offices on the west of the territory will be removed and others substituted on the east, while local administration will also have to be transferred. The currency problem

SERIOUS BLOW TO HAUPTMANN

EXPERT'S DAMAGING EVIDENCE

DEFENCE WILL INSIST NOTES FORGED

(By Telegraph. Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894. Received Jan. 16, 9 a.m.)

Flemington, Jan. 15. The handwriting expert, Mr. John Tyrrell, whose evidence was largely responsible for the conviction of Leopold and Loeb, testified at the trial of Bruno Hauptmann to-day.

His testimony was a blow to the defence, for injurious evidence from this man counts with a jury. He said that the ransom notes showed a vain attempt at disguise by the writer. And the writer was Hauptmann, he added.

Mr. Tyrrell's evidence was of the utmost importance to the prosecution in the Leopold and Loeb case. It will be recalled that these young sons of rich Chicago business men, following some perverted inclination, murdered a young acquaintance, Bobby Franks, after having tortured him fiendishly.

They were sentenced to life imprisonment, escaping the death penalty because of their youth.

Meanwhile, the three relatives of Isidore Fisch, who will testify at the trial, have arrived in Flemington. They were accompanied by Miss Minna Steiglitz, who nursed Fisch before he died.—United Press.

STRANGE TACTICS

Flemington, Jan. 15. A startling suggestion was made by the defence at to-day's hearing of the Hauptmann trial to the effect that Isidore Fisch, who succumbed to tuberculosis at Leipzig, might have forged Hauptmann's signature on the ransom letters.

The defence also intimated its intention of showing that the ransom letters were written by an educated man, not Hauptmann, who was a labourer.

Two sisters and a brother of Isidore Fisch arrived at Flemington to-day from Germany.

It is authoritatively stated that while the State can make no deal with Hauptmann, a confession by him naming confederates might be taken into consideration after the verdict.—Reuter.

Conspiracies Suspected

SEQUEL TO HARRIS CASE HEARD

London, Jan. 15. After sixteen days' hearing, the Bow Street Magistrate has remanded the case against Frederick Edgar Rickards and Henry Joseph, charged in connection with developments arising from the fire conspiracy trial of Leopold Harris and others in 1933, until January 18, for commitment to the Old Bailey.

Both the accused pleaded not guilty.

Rickards and Joseph were charged with unlawfully conspiring with Harris and others to defraud insurance companies by making fraudulent claims.—Reuter.

DAY BY DAY NEWS IN BRIEF

BE NOT MERELY GOOD, BE GOOD FOR SOMETHING.—Thoracut.

Arsenio Silverio, a youth aged ten years, of No. 5 Lock Road, injured his foot when it got caught in the spokes of a bicycle which he was riding yesterday. He was sent to the Kowloon Hospital for treatment.

At a meeting held at 11 a.m. to-day of shareholders of the Ka Wah Savings Bank, Limited, at its offices at 200 Des Voeux Road Central, a resolution for the voluntary liquidation was approved, and the following were appointed Liquidators: Messrs. Woo Yeo-ting, Chan Tat-sam, and Fung Yeo-wing.

Lam Wah, aged 20, a store keeper, was brought before Mr. E. W. Hamilton at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning, charged with the larceny by servant of two files from the China Light and Power Company, Taiwan, on Monday. Pleading guilty to the offence, defendant was sentenced to one month's hard labour. Mr. J. H. Shaw, storekeeper of the Company, appeared as complainant and stated that defendant had been employed in the Company for two years. Altogether 14 files had been lost.

KIDNAPPER SENT TO PRISON

was kidnapped at about ten minutes to seven. In view of the definitions given in Russia, on Crimes, Eighth Edition (1923) second defendant is therefore not a principal in the first degree, "who has committed the act with his own hands or through an innocent agent"; or a principal in the second degree "who was present aiding and abetting at the commission of the felony"; or an accessory before the fact who "being absent at the time of the offence, procures, counsels, commands or abets another to commit a felony."

The defendant has been charged as a principal and the Crown argued that, under section 4 of Ordinance 14 of 1929, a conviction as principal would be. The defence contest the construction of the section and also point out that the defendant is not indicted.

MERITS OF CASE

My position is that the defendant is being tried before me summarily and I shall give judgment on the substantial merits and facts of the case as proved before me and if necessary convict the defendant of any offence of which he may appear to have been guilty, but I am empowered to do by section 21 of Magistrates Ordinance, as the defendant have been in no way deceived or misled.

Russel defined an accessory after the fact as a person who, knowing a felony to have been committed by another, receives, relieves, comforts or assists the felon. To support this charge there must be some act proved to have been done to assist the felon personally. With this, Archbold, 1931 Edition, page 1461, agrees—phrasing it "in order to hinder his apprehension, trial or punishment."

Now in this case there is no doubt that Rocha sought to hinder Barrett's apprehension, trial or punishment by an appeal to Ribeiro's mercy. But is an appeal sufficient to establish the offence?

INSTANCES CITED

In Russel an instance is given where A knew B had stolen a £100 note and tried to change it with his, A's, hand and subsequently went with it to a shop and waited while B bought goods and so got the note changed. In Archbold, the instances given are concealing the felon in his house or shutting the door against his pursuers or supplying him with money, a house or other necessities in order to enable him to escape.

Now in all these instances there seems to be absent any intention of communicating with the injured party or of settling the matter right. It is stated clearly that speaking or writing to obtain a felon's pardon or deliverance is not sufficient to make a party an accessory after the fact—Archbold 116 cites 26 Ass. 47.

I am of opinion that had second defendant gone to Ribeiro and said "I am going to take you to your son, but I implore you not to prosecute the guilty man," he would have been within the law. But he went further and asked for money. He went further still and said $100 was not enough, and he admits in reply to my question that he had at the back of his mind a feeling that I might help my friend if I hung up the address bit.

TECHNICALLY GUILTY

Furthermore, what would have happened had not Mr. Botelho, Senior, and the police been present, Rocha would have conveyed the $300 to Barrett who could in all probability, have left the Colony unprosecuted. This, it seems to me, would have been definitely comforting and assisting him. I, therefore, I may say with utmost reluctance, find that the second defendant is guilty in the eyes of the law of being an accessory after the fact on charges (B) and (C).

But between the finding of technical guilt and the assessment of punishment I have to consider the motives and actions of the accused. He is a respectable young man whose witnesses to character are the witnesses for the prosecution. I am absolutely satisfied he acted from the dictates of friendship and charity, without seeking any personal advantage and that, had he realised he was breaking the law, he would not have done what he did. This may not alter his technical guilt, but it must very largely affect my opinion of the gravity of his offence.

IMPULSIVE YOUNG

My view is that he is an impulsive young fool, but a staunch friend. I shall therefore use my power under section 30 of subsection I, whereof I take the intention of the Legislature to be that if the guilt of a defendant who is convicted according to the letter of the law be so trifling that it merits no punishment in the Magistrate's opinion, he may dismiss the complaint without proceeding to conviction, as I do here as regards charges B and C. Rocha stands discharged.

RELIEF FOR FAMINE AREAS

LARGE SUM SET ASIDE

Shanghai, Jan. 16. According to Mr. Hui Shih-ying, Chairman of the China Famine Relief Commission, who recently visited Nanking in connection with the problem of relieving the famine-stricken districts throughout the country during the winter season, the Central Government has remitted a first instalment of $300,000 and has promised to remit the next instalment of $250,000 within ten days.

As a result of his discussion with the Nanking authorities, he said, a preliminary plan has been drawn up for the establishment of a Rural District Credit Corporation, which would be financed by capital fixed at $10,000,000. Thirty per cent. of the capital would be subscribed by the Central Bank of China and the rest would be subscribed by a number of leading Chinese banks.—Central News.

But between the finding of technical guilt and the assessment of punishment I have to consider the motives and actions of the accused. He is a respectable young man whose witnesses to character are the witnesses for the prosecution. I am absolutely satisfied he acted from the dictates of friendship and charity, without seeking any personal advantage and that, had he realised he was breaking the law, he would not have done what he did. This may not alter his technical guilt, but it must very largely affect my opinion of the gravity of his offence.

CRESIVAL

PRETTY WEDDING

MR. J. L. STEPHENS & MISS J. C. SMITH

The wedding took place at the Rosary Church this morning of Miss Jane Campbell Smith, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Robert Smith of Bangkok, Thailand, and Mr. Jack Leslie Stephens, second son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Edward Stephens of Beaconsfield, Bucks, England.

The Rev. Father Rossi officiated at the ceremony.

The bridegroom, who is a member of the Hongkong Police Force, is well-known on the football field, playing inside right for the Police team. He has played in several representative matches and is considered one of the best on the forward line of the Police team.

The bride, who was given away by Mr. C. H. Dodson, wore a Madame Addie gown of ivory chiffon velvet set off with a long tulle veil. She carried a sheaf of white gladioli.

Attending the bride were Miss Eunice Freda Dodson as flower girl and Master Charles Henry Dodson as page boy. Eunice wore a pink crepe de chine dress, created by Madame Addie, while Charles wore white corded silk.

Mrs. C. H. Dodson, as Matron of Honour, wore a Maitron Marimac gown of green taffeta with hat to match.

Mr. Vic Chittenden of the Harbour Department was best man.

After the wedding ceremony, a reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dodson, No. 1 Cambay Buildings, Kowloon. Later, the happy couple left for Macao. Mrs. Stephens wearing a grey crepe de chine dress trimmed with red, Coat, hat and shoes were worn to match.

SERIAL STORY—

Lovable

BY MARY RAYMOND

BEGIN HERE TO-DAY

ANN HOLLISTER, pretty and 20, finds work in a library. She falls in love with a man—Valerie Valente, a girl who has been by her roommate, BAHIA KENT.

Later Ann meets PETER KENDALL, wealthy and prominent and engaged to VALENTINE BAHIA, Valerie's twin without a name.

Valerie goes about with a boy set. One night she attends a party at which a man is shot. Peter, learning how Valerie has done with him, tells her their engagement is at an end.

The same day Ann breaks her engagement to Tony. She and Peter meet in a restaurant and discuss their mutual unpopularity. They make up and marry; she also agrees. They are married that night and set out for Florida.

The first day after their arrival there, Ann finds out that Peter has a past.

"Peter, I'm sorry, but I'm not in love with you," Valerie says.

"I'll get breakfast and you take it to Juan," Peter suggests on the way back.

"Not much," she answers sturdily.

"Peter, isn't it pathetic how little Sam and Lona know about raising children?"

"Pretty ignorant, but still Juan and little Rosalie look fairly healthy."

"It was just a rag Rosalie was wearing."

"Would you like to drive to town and get some things?"

Ann looks at him. It was positively uncanny how he read her mind.

"I'd love to, and I don't need any 'iesta'."

"Not if it's a beauty sleep," Peter said.

It was his first compliment. Ann found herself flushing.

It was Valerie who had marveled over Peter, moving easily about the small kitchen, handling pots and pans as though he knew what to do with them.

"Peter, what can't you do?"

Ann laughed. She was feeling very contented this morning. All the trouble of the night before was gone.

She and Peter were friends again.

After breakfast, they drove to town where Ann shopped for an hour, Peter watching and occasionally making suggestions.

"What size?" the Italian store-keeper asked.

"About this big," Peter stretched out his arms to an approximate measurement of Rosalie's short body.

"What age is your little girl?"

"Three," Ann guessed hastily.

"Like the father, perhaps?" the woman queried, with an admiring look at Peter.

"No," answered Peter firmly.

"Like her mother. Exactly."

Ann and Peter were both laughing when they left the shop, bunched.

If Rosalie were shabby, Juan was sure to need clothes too. And a dress or two a piece would delight the heart of Marie and Lona. That made Peter think of shirts and ties and a pair of extra trousers for Sam and Carl.

The Italian woman and her husband followed them to the door, talking volubly. This had been one of their biggest days. Truly, these tourists spent freely.

"Can you beat it?" Peter said, lost in admiration of Juan's prowess for swimming.

"I'm going too," Ann reached for his negligee at the foot of the bed.

If Peter were going to do an insane, foolhardy thing like looking around, she would be right behind him.

But just as Peter had touched the key in the front door a voice called, "Mr. Peter, please!"

Peter flung the door wide. "Juan, you little devil!"

The small boy stood grinning, pleased with the excitement he had caused. Ann laughed hysterically.

"Juan, what do you mean by yelling like that?"

"Mr. Peter, please. I knock and nobody hears me. So I cry like a bird."

"Like a bird?" from Peter.

"Like a devil bird," said Juan.

"Can you beat it?" Peter said, lost in admiration of Juan's prowess for swimming.

"I can truthfully say that I never heard anything as devilish as that,"

"I committe fine," Juan said.

"You do," Peter said, "but why the midnight call, Juan?"

"Little sister ver' sick. Can't get her breath good."

"Good heavens," said Peter. "Why didn't you say no?" Ann, we'll have to go over."

Ann nodded. "It sounds like crowd, I'll get the mustard." She flew to the kitchen.

They followed closely on Juan's heels—Ann with her travelling coat buttoned over her gown, Peter in his enveloping robe. Peter's feet were shod and socksless. Ann's bare feet were in white sandals.

Sam had gone for a doctor, Lenn told them, but the baby's breathing was much worse. They had become frightened and sent Juan for help.

It was croup, as Ann had guessed.

Lena had never heard of croup but she was fairly adept in helping Ann with the plaster and melting vaseline which was on hand for bruises and sores.

It was an all-night vigil. Ann and Peter stayed until the doctor arrived and the little patient's breathing became more natural, and she had dropped into sleep.

"Stay with Marie, Lena. Mr.

Kendall and I will get our own breakfast," Ann said.

Peter thought that was kind of Ann. He thought, too, that he had never seen her look as sweet as she had when she was stooping over the curly-haired Rosalie, gently loosening Rosalie's gown at the throat and softly smoothing the plaster on the small chest. Ann had looked like a child, herself, with her bronze hair tumbling over the dark coat.

"I'll get breakfast and you take it to Juan," Peter suggested on the way back.

"Not much," she answers sturdily.

"Peter, isn't it pathetic how little Sam and Lona know about raising children?"

"Pretty ignorant, but still Juan and little Rosalie look fairly healthy."

"It was just a rag Rosalie was wearing."

"Would you like to drive to town and get some things?"

Ann looks at him. It was positively uncanny how he read her mind.

"I'd love to, and I don't need any 'iesta'."

"Not if it's a beauty sleep," Peter said.

It was his first compliment. Ann found herself flushing.

It was Valerie who had marveled over Peter, moving easily about the small kitchen, handling pots and pans as though he knew what to do with them.

"Peter, what can't you do?"

Ann laughed. She was feeling very contented this morning. All the trouble of the night before was gone.

She and Peter were friends again.

After breakfast, they drove to town where Ann shopped for an hour, Peter watching and occasionally making suggestions.

"What size?" the Italian store-keeper asked.

"About this big," Peter stretched out his arms to an approximate measurement of Rosalie's short body.

"What age is your little girl?"

"Three," Ann guessed hastily.

"Like the father, perhaps?" the woman queried, with an admiring look at Peter.

"No," answered Peter firmly.

"Like her mother. Exactly."

Ann and Peter were both laughing when they left the shop, bunched.

If Rosalie were shabby, Juan was sure to need clothes too. And a dress or two a piece would delight the heart of Marie and Lona. That made Peter think of shirts and ties and a pair of extra trousers for Sam and Carl.</p

CONTRACT BRIDGE

Solution to Previous Contract Problem.

By W. E. McKenney

This is the first of a series of three articles describing an interesting and unusual defensive play. It is a play that all my readers should know. While it doesn't come up very often, it is invaluable when opportunity does present itself for its use.

When South bids diamonds and is supported by North, West has a pretty fair knowledge of the diamond situation. He knows that, between North and South, they hold eight diamonds and probably nine. If they hold nine diamonds in the two hands, this leaves but one for his partner, so West elects to open his ace of diamonds, on which East plays the ten.

Now West can continue, either with the nine or three of diamonds, and this is the play that I want to point out to you. If you return the lower of the two, you tell your partner that your entry will be in the lower of the unbid suits, while if you return the higher card, you definitely tell your partner that you have an entry in the higher of the unbid suits.

In this particular case, West has the ace of hearts, so his proper play is the nine of diamonds, which, of course, East ruffs.

Now can you see what great advantage this information is to East. His natural return is a club, but if he returns a club, the declarer will make his contract.

His partner's play of the nine of diamonds has told him to return the higher of the unbid suits, so he leads a heart.

West wins with the ace and returns another diamond, which East ruffs, and the contract is defeated.

Today's Contract Problem
South is playing the contract at three spades. West cashes the king and ace of hearts. Which heart should he now lead, the eight or the deuce, and why?

SASSOON BANK'S
BIG LOANASSISTING CHINESE
RIVER PROJECT

Shanghai, Jan. 16. It has just been announced that the Sassoan Banking Company signed an agreement on January 12 to lend to the Hual River Commission $223,000 for construction of a waterflow regulator.

The loan will bear six per cent. interest, amortization being carried out over a ten year period beginning January 1936. The loan is secured by a portion of the British Boxer Indemnity fund.—Reuter.

CHEKIANG WANTS HELP

Shanghai, Jan. 16. Because of the Chekiang provincial government's embarrassed financial condition and large expenditure on reconstruction, it is using its $10,000,000 government bonds as security to negotiate a $6,000,000 loan from prominent Shanghai banks.

Negotiations are carried out by the Chekiang provincial treasurer, Hsu Tseng-po, with the bankers here.

RUN SUBSIDIES

Amoy, Jan. 16. The run on leading Chinese banks here yesterday, following the moratorium announced by the Amoy Commercial Bank Limited, has subsided.

DOLLAR'S SHARP
RISE1s. 9d. MARK NOW REACHED

The Hongkong dollar rose a farthing this morning to 1s. 9d., following a slight rise in silver prices in London, due partly to the big drop in the cross-rate.

The market locally this morning was firm, inter-bank business being done at 1s. 9d. and 1s. 9d./16d.

Silver rose 1/16th in London, India and China bought, whilst speculators sold, business being small.

In New York, silver was unchanged at 64 1/4.

London, Jan. 16. The London on New York cross-rate touched 4.8375 here yesterday and closed at 4.86.

The London on Paris cross-rate touched 76 and closed at 74.27/32.

The weakening of sterling is attributed to a rush to buy dollars both on London and Continental accounts.

The demand for dollars was based mainly on Trade payments arising from the heavy increase in the United States export surplus caused by devaluation of the dollar.—United Press.
